GERMANS PRESS PURSUIT

UNITS CONTINUE MUTINOUS

Whole Division of 11th Army Said to Have Been Executed by Means of Artillery.

MANY MORE TOWNS LOST

But Rumanians and Russians in Moldavia Capture 2,000 Teutons and 33 Cannon.

PETROGRAD, July 26.—Such is the demoralization of the Russian armies in Galicia that the General Staff confesses its powerlessness to make a stand against the swiftly pursuing Teutons, and the Sereth River lines now are being abandoned. Several units continue to disobey orders and to give up their positions without a show of resistance.

Rumanian forces in Tuesday's and Wednesday's battle on the Rumanian front, however, captured more than 1,000 prisoners. The Rumanians also took thirty-three guns, seventeen machine guns, ten mine throwers, and much other military material. On the same front, the official statement says, the Russians also captured about 1,000 prisoners and twenty-four guns.

In the direction of Vilna there has been an artillery duel. In the region of Smorgon and Krevo the enemy's fire was more intense.

East of Tarnopol, under enemy pressure, our troops retired to the Gnizdiorzno and Gnina Rivers.

Counterattacks Made in Vain.

Northeast of Trembowla on Wednesday superior German forces attacked and penetrated our positions on the River Gnizna in the region of Loszniov. Efforts to restore the situation were unsuccessful.

At the same time, the enemy, penetrating our positions on the Sereth to the south of Trembowla and in the region of Zalavia and Podhaytse, began to develop his stroke in a northeastern direction, in view of which our troops occupying positions in the region of Trembowla retired eastward. Owing to the ineffective composition of our units and the state of their morale, our counterattacks brought us no definite results.

Developing his stroke toward the south along the western bank of the Sereth, the enemy occupied Janoff, Butznioff, and Zvieniacz, (south of Tarnopol,) the enemy's heavy artillery delivering an intense fire on the eastern bank of the Sereth and in the region of the village of Kabkloviloki.

On Wednesday evening our troops began to retire from the Sereth eastward. Certain units are continuing to leave their positions voluntarily, without carrying out the military tasks they had been intrusted with. However, with these units there are others which are devotedly fulfilling their duty toward the Fatherland.

Between the Dniester and the Carpathians our troops, covered by rear guards, have continued to retire eastward. Nijniuv and Tlumacz have been evacuated by our troops.

Rumanian Front—On Wednesday the Rumanian and Russian troops continued to press upon the retiring enemy to the west of the Suchitza River and have moved to a line represented by Villatten-Sovela-Guerille-Vidra.

Carpathian Front Gone Now.

BERLIN, July 26, (via London.)—An official bulletin issued by the War Office tonight announces that further German successes in Eastern Galicia have compelled the Russians to abandon their Carpathian front as far as the Kirlibaba sector.

The day statement told that the Galician towns of Bucacz, Tlumacz, Ottynia, and Delatyn had been captured and that the Russians were retreating in the direction of Czernowitz, the capital of Bukowina. Following is the text of the day statement:

Eastern theatre, front of Prince Leopold, army group of General von Eichhorn: South of Smorgon our concentrated artillery fire has partly closed up the breach in our lines made by the Russians. The enemy was compelled to retreat, and almost all of our former position again is in our possession.

Army group of General von Boehm-Ermolli: During stubborn engagements our divisions gained heights west of Tarnopol and the Gnizna River sector to the Trembowla-Husiatyn road. Further southwest Bucacz, Tlumacz, Ottynia, and Delatyn have been taken.

Front of Archduke Joseph: The Russian Carpathian front, owing to the pressure to the north of the Dniester, has now commenced to weaken to the south of the Tartar Pass. The enemy is retreating there in the direction of Czernowitz. During an attack yesterday the Russians were driven from the Beba and Ludowa heights.

Army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen: From midday until nightfall there was a lively artillery en-

Kerensky Hurt Stopping Soldiers' Fight; Foe Tells of Bravery of Women Warriors

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, July 26.—The correspondent of the Budapest journal Az Est, on the Galician front, telegraphs under date of July 22:

"On the Brzezany front for the first time we came in contact with 'death regiments' composed entirely of Russian women flying the red flag. They fought with extraordinary bravery, frequently counter-attacking fiercely, led by women officers.

"It was near Brzezany, on Hill Lysonie, according to prisoners, that Kerensky was severely wounded in the arm. A Russian infantry division refused to fight, and began retreating. The Russian artillery, furious at the desertion, turned their guns on the infantry. Thereupon Kerensky, in his automobile, drove between the crossfire and succeeded in stopping the fratricidal slaughter, though wounded himself."

BATTLE TO DEATH RAGING ON AISNE

INFLICT HEAVY LOSSES

PARIS, July 26.—Stinging under their defeat on the plauteaus north of Craonne, the Germans launched a desperate attack last night on the French lines to the west of the Aisne sector where the French won their notable victory on Tuesday. The attack was delivered with great ferocity on a front of about two miles from La Bovelle farm to a point east of Hurtebise. The French poured a murderous fire into the Germans but were unable to stem the advance. The enemy, despite very great losses, penetrated certain parts of the French line south of Ailles.

Heavy fighting, accompanied by an intense bombardment, continued in this sector throughout the day, but the Germans were unable to advance their lines any further. At several points the French succeeded in regaining the ground taken by the enemy during the night.

A dispatch from The Associated Press correspondent at French Headquarters says:

"The Germans in a persistent effort to recapture at least some part of the Chemin-des-Dames, transferred their attention today to the region of Hurtebise, on which they launched a strong attack, supported by heavy artillery concentration. The infantry assaulted again and again, but, despite the heavy masses thrown into the action, they were unable to secure any advantage, other than entrance into a small section of advanced French trenches to the south of Ailles.

"Details of the attack on the Californie and Casemates plateaus, in which the Germans suffered the most complete defeat in the first half of the week, show that some of the Prussian regiments lost 50 per cent. of their effectives. They employed more than 100 batteries during the bombardment."

The Germans also made an attack in Champagne, but the resistance of the French prevented any progress on the part of their adversaries. North of Auberive, in the Champagne, the French penetrated the German trenches, and inflicted heavy losses on the Germans.

The statement issued this afternoon follows:

During the night German troops manifested a great degree of nervousness. Infantry attacks were resumed last night at 7 o'clock with ferocity along a front of three kilometers, from a point to the east of Hurtebise to the southern boundaries of La Boveille. The enemy, in spite of the fact that he made use of imposing numbers in this fighting, was able to penetrate certain portions of our first-line trenches south of Ailles only after unheard-of efforts and suffering very great losses. His repeated assaults at the Hurtebise Farm, as well as at a point further east of this location, were broken by our fire.

In Champagne a German attack was delivered with rapidity and violence on Mont Haut. It was preceded by an intense bombardment and it lasted all night long, but the determined resistance of our troops made German progress impossible. On the other hand, to the north of Auberive, during a successful operation, we penetrated certain unoccupied German trenches and continuing our advance we engaged in spirited fighting certain detachments of the enemy upon whom we inflicted perceptible losses.

On the left bank of the Meuse the artillery activity in which both sides participated has been maintained with violence.

Tonight's statement reads:

Engagements accompanied by an intense bombardment on the Hurtebise Plateau and south of Ailles continued throughout the day, but without enabling the enemy to make progress. At several points we recaptured the ground gained during the night by the adversary.

In Champagne enemy attacks were renewed unsuccessfully during the course of the morning, followed in the afternoon by a violent bombardment, which extended on the left from Mont Blond and on the right as far as the neighborhood of the Casque. Our artillery replied energetically, which rendered impossible a sortie by the German infantry.

On both banks of the Meuse the artillery was very active. The day was calm on the rest of the front.

Took 1,150 French Prisoners.

BERLIN, July 26, (via London.)—Dominating positions on the Aisne front northwest of Hurtebise were captured today by the Germans, the War Office announces. French trenches on a front of 1,000 meters and 400 meters deep, south of Ailles, were stormed, the statement says.

PACIFISTS ROUTED IN THE COMMONS

ASQUITH CALLS HOPE FUTILE

Bonar Law Sees Victory, Although Allied Nations Are Staggering Under Russian Blow.

LONDON, July 26.—A little group of pacifists instituted a peace debate in the House of Commons, this afternoon, by introducing a resolution declaring that the German Reichstag resolution favoring peace by an understanding expressed the principles for which Great Britain stood throughout, and calling on the Government, in conjunction with the Allies, to re-state their peace terms accordingly. The resolution also set forth that the Allies should accept the Russian proposal that the coming allied conference on war aims should comprise representatives of the people and not solely spokesmen of the Governments.

The resolution was moved by James Ramsay MacDonald, Socialist and Labor Member for Leicester. It was supported by Charles P. Trevelyan, Hastings B. Lees-Smith, and Arthur A. Ponsonby, Liberals, and Philip Snowden, Socialist.

After a debate which consumed the whole of the evening session, the House defeated the resolution by a vote of 148 to 19. The announcement of the vote was received with some cheers and much laughter.

The smallness of the numbers in the House when the division was taken is an indication of the lack of interest shown by Parliament in any hope of a useful peace movement at the present juncture. The conviction was voiced in an important statement by Herbert H. Asquith, former Premier, that nothing was to be hoped from the present temper of the German Reichstag and people. Andrew Bonar Law, Government leader in the House, expressed complete confidence in victory for the Allies, although he said they were staggering under the blow of the Russian crisis.

Admits Pacifist Unpopularity.

Mr. MacDonald admitted that his resolution expressed the opinion of only a small minority, but he contended that this minority was ever growing. Stockholm, he said, had borne its fruit. The allied conferences would bear more, and the international conference would bear still more fruit. Such a conference would find out that the time had come for an active effort for peace, and it would find a peace that would not be disturbed by preparations for war.

Charles P. Trevelyan, who seconded the resolution, agreed in condemning the uncertainty in the speech of the German Chancellor, Dr. Michaelis, and said that all were agreed that peace awaited the restoration of Belgium and France, without any economic or other conditions. He doubted whether there could be peace until all the Governments clearly and expressly repudiated the idea of conquest or annexations. While it might be the duty of the Government to reply to the German Chancellor, it was the duty of the House of Commons to reply to the Reichstag resolution. Dr. Michaelis's speech was made on that resolution, and the fact that he did not speak against it or try to dissuade the Reichstag from passing it ought not to be overlooked.

Reichstag Impotent, Says Asquith.

Former Premier Asquith expressed the opinion that the previous speakers attached more importance to the Reichstag resoluton than it really deserved. They seemed to have forgotten the circumstances under which it was passed. After an obscure struggle in Berlin, in which for a time it seemed as if the advocates of a relatively moderate policy would have their way, the military chiefs appeared on the scene and secured the dismissal of the Imperial Chancellor, in whom the Emperor only a few days before had expressed his unbounded and undiminished confidence.

Peace, said Mr. Asquith, had become the supreme interest of mankind, but subject to an all-important condition—that it should be a peace which did not

M. P. Challenges Colleague to Fight 20-Round Bout to Settle Dispute

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 26.—Should Major Archer-Shee, M. P., accept the challenge of Pemberton Billing, M. P., to a twenty-round boxing contest at the National Sporting Club, there should be a gala night at that institution, while the championship of the House of Commons (presumably with belt) will no longer be in doubt.

The first meeting between the combatants has already taken place with indecisive result. It was a short, sharp affair. On Wednesday they had a set-to on the greensward outside of the House of Commons, when after a brief spar both fell to the ground. Then the police arrived and parted the gasping and disheveled tribunes. What damage the pugilistic M. P.'s suffered is not known, but neither was present at prayers today.

The affair arose out of an exchange of words in the Commons, during which Archer-Shee called Billing a cad. Billing invited the Major to repeat his charge outside the House, with the above result. The Major is said to be dissatisfied with the result, so Billing issued the challenge to him to fight twenty rounds at the National Sporting Club, the loser to pay a hundred guineas to the Red Cross Fund, while the management, if it thinks fit to charge admission to those who wish to witness the contest, must turn over the whole proceeds to the war charity. Manager Bettinson said he was sure the club committee would willingly entertain such a contest.

SENATOR RESENTS SPRING-RICE'S ACT

King of Utah Calls His Letter on Portland Harbor Improvement Impertinence.

KNOX CHECKS DISCUSSION

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—"That's an impertinence," exclaimed Senator King of Utah during the Senate debate today on the River and Harbor bill, when a letter was read by Senator Hale of Maine from Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, approving the project of deepening the harbor at Portland, Me., to make it accessible to transatlantic steamers. The British Ambassador wrote that the contemplated improvement would be "of great service to Canadian vessels during the war."

The Senator from Utah resented what he characterized as an "intrusion" by the British Ambassador into Congressional affairs. Senator Knox urged Senator King to withdraw his aspersion upon Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, but the Senator declined to do it.

During the debate Senator Sherman of Illinois, backing up Senator King's viewpoint, compared the British Ambassador's "intrusion" to the Sackville-West incident during the Cleveland campaign of 1888, when Sackville-West, British Ambassador at the time, wrote a letter conveying the hint that the election of Grover Cleveland would be preferable, from the British standpoint, to that of Benjamin Harrison. This episode resulted in Sackville-West being recalled.

By stepping into the breach, Senator Knox turned off the debate on Sir Cecil Spring-Rice and his letter when it looked as if the whole Senate was about to plunge into it.

The project to improve Portland Harbor, which later was adopted as part of the River and Harbor bill, contemplates deepening it thirty-five feet beyond its present depth of thirty feet, $300,000 being appropriated for the purpose. Senator Hale, during the debate, said the Canadian Government would use Portland Harbor if it were made available for transatlantic vessels. Several Canadian steamers that recently tried to load at Portland, he said, had to abandon the attempt because the water was too shallow.

British Embassy,
Washington, May 14, 1917.

Dear Mr. Senator: I have informed the Canadian Government of the provision in the House River and Harbor bill relative to improved facilities for Portland Harbor. The Governor General informs me that the Canadian Government would be glad to make use of the facilities recommended by the Board of Engineers of the War Department during the continuance of the war, and that these facilities will be of great service during the time of navigation in the St. Lawrence being closed. They would be of great importance for the successful prosecution of the war. Yours sincerely,
CECIL SPRING-RICE.

"This is a piece of emergency legislation that will be of direct benefit to our allies in this war," said Senator Hale.

"I want to say," said Senator King, "that if the only ground upon which this appropriation can be defended is a letter from the British Ambassador, notwithstanding the English are our allies in this contest, I should not feel like voting for the measure. It seems to me that this is an impertinence on the part of the British Ambassador to intrude into this matter, although he is our ally."

PERSHING AT CONFERENCE.

Discusses Military Situation with Leaders at Balkan Meeting.

PARIS, July 25, (delayed.)—While the principal delegates to the conference of the Entente Allies today discussed political questions, Major Gen. Pershing, commander of the American expedition; General Sir William Robertson, Chief of the British Imperial Staff; General Smuts, Minister of Defense of the Union of South Africa; General Foch, Chief of the Staff of the French Ministry of War; General Count Cadorna, Chief of the Italian General Staff, and the other military representatives conferred lengthily on the military situation.

Montenegro has been invited to take part in the allied conference, and Eugene Popovitch, Premier and Foreign Minister, will represent his Government.

Kitchener's Sister Believes That He Is Still Alive

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, July 27.—According to The Morning Post, Mrs. Parker, sister of Lord Kitchener, at the opening of the charity fête at Hastings said she did not share in the general belief that her brother went down on the British cruiser Hampshire. It was the first time she publicly announced her opinion on the subject, but it is her firm belief that he is still alive and would one day return.

Ever since the loss of the Hampshire Mrs. Parker has tried to find out what happened to her brother.

CALLS FOR CURB ON SOARING PRICES

500% PROFIT IN FLAGS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The Federal Trade Commission today recommended that Congress take up immediately the consideration of laws which would protect the public against "indefensible" and "extortionate" prices, which it is alleged are being charged for some commodities, the demand for which has been increased greatly since the United States entered the war.

Basing its charges on an investigation into the tremendous increase in the price for flags, which it was hinted had approached a national scandal in so far as some manufacturers and dealers were concerned, the commission concluded its argument with this statement:

"The demand and price situation existing as to flags is typical of a condition caused by the war. Unlawful agencies and acts contemplated by the anti-trust laws are not necessary to bring about hardship to the public and the industries of the nation.

"The public and the industries are not protected against sudden, unreasonable, and extortionate prices. Competition in selling has been practically suspended, and prices are made not merely to yield fair and generous profits based on producing and distributing costs, but are sent to an indefensibly high level made possible by the great demand and with only normal supply.

"The commission suggests consideration by Congress of immediate legislation adequate to afford prompt relief generally to the public and the industries in war times against unreasonable prices, not only when such prices result from unlawful agencies but also where they arise merely out of abnormal conditions in which an abandonment of the public to an unchecked working of supply and demand must result in extreme hardship and inequity."

Profits of 500 Per Cent.

The report was signed by the full commission. The question of extortionate prices for flags is dealt with at length by the commission in the text of the report. It is alleged that in some cases the profits reach 500 per cent., and that such a situation was made possible simply because certain agencies took advantage of the great demand for American flags when this country entered the war.

The Department of Justice, it is stated, has been notified of some of the practices which the commission discovered, and the commission has ordered proceedings against at least one association.

The report goes on to say:

"The prices of American flags charged by leading manufacturers have increased 100 to 150 per cent. since April, 1916. Scores of others, not regularly engaged in the manufacture of flags, but who are now so engaged, have secured during April and May, 1917, prices ranging from 100 to 500 per cent. higher than the prices current in April, 1916. On high-grade display flags the gross profits of the regularly established flag manufacturers on new business done in April and May, 1917, have been 75 to 100 per cent., based on the average cost. New flag-making establishments for the same period have made from 100 to 200 per cent. gross profits. Flags are sold generally by manufacturers direct to retailers, and these, of whom many have themselves paid excessive prices to the manufacturers, have secured from the public prices 100 to 300 per cent. higher than prevailing retail prices of a year ago.

"The total amount of money spent for flags at normal prices is about $5,000,000 each year. Of this amount probably not more than $500,000 has represented the gross profits to manufacturers. But in view of the present great increase in demand and volume of sales at abnormally high prices the total profits received by manufacturers are not less than ten times the amount secured during 1916.

Manufacturing Cost Higher.

"The cost to flag manufacturers of wool and cotton flag bunting has not been greatly increased since Feb. 1, 1917, since which time the great increase in demand for flags occurred. Since April 1, 1916, the average cost of making flags, including cost of materials, has increased less than 50 per cent., while the average margin of gross profit to the manufacturers on new business has increased more than 500 per cent. Many of the older established flag manufacturers had not prior to May 1, 1917, benefited greatly by the advanced prices because of old orders filled at former lower prices.

"The greatest advantage of the sudden unprecedented demand for flags has been taken by the new establishments which have recently engaged in flag-making because of the prospect offered of excessive profits.

"An association has been in existence for some time among flagmakers controlling the major portion of the flag production. Prior to 1915 there was among members of the association an agreement fixing the prices at which wool flags were sold. Because of the unprecedented demand and runaway market, there has been no successful price fixing by this association or its membership recently, but attempts have recently been made to fix a new stand-

ASK $2,500,000,000 FOR COAST DEFENSE; NATION NOT AWAKE TO PERIL, SAYS BORAH, BUT OFFICIAL WASHINGTON IS CONFIDENT

Germany Sending Many Secret Agents Here; Americans Resident in Europe in Her Service

COPENHAGEN, July 26.—Information obtained here shows that more effective measures than are now in force for supervision of Scandinavian liners plying to the United States must be put into effect if the passage of numerous German agents and couriers and the transmission of intelligence by German spies in America are to be checked. It is said authoritatively that German passport-forging bureaus are equipping German agents in Scandinavia with fraudulent Scandinavian passports. These are copied from genuine originals in the same fashion as American passports have been counterfeited photographically by the notorious Pass Bureau of the Admiralty.

New names and descriptions are substituted occasionally, but sometimes the only change is to attach a new photograph of the ostensible holder. Every liner now sailing to the United States carries 200 or 300 passengers, principally of Scandinavian nationality. There is little to prevent the Intelligence Department of the German Admiralty, now under the leadership of Captain Karl Boy-Ed, ex-Naval Attaché at Washington, from planting any desired number of agents, equipped apparently with genuine Scandinavian passports, among the passengers. There is reason to believe this is being done.

Various attempts to recruit neutrals for courier and information missions to the United States have been reported more or less definitely. The Scandinavian police also could tell a tale of unmasked Americans who are employed in the German secret service. They are working against the interests of their own country and of neutral States, whose hospitality they enjoy, as well as against the European Entente. It may be difficult to stop the activities of the two latter classes. It would be comparatively easy, however, to strike at the fraudulent Scandinavian passport people at the source.

WAR PESSIMISM WANES AT CAPITAL

SEE END TO RUSSIAN CRISIS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The return to Washington of the group of army officers sent to France to make an inspection has been coincident with a marked revival of spirits in the higher official circles. These officers brought first-hand information as to conditions on the Western front, and it may be said that they came back with a decided feeling of optimism as to the final outcome of the great struggle.

It is realized here that out of the patriotic desire to make the American people appreciate the seriousness of the situation has grown a propaganda which promises to produce an effect not advantageous to the common cause. Since the war began groups of men in Washington of keen observation, some of them holding important places under the Government, have developed opposite views as to the conduct and the progress of the war. One group sees everything in a pessimistic way. The other, while it cannot be said to be filled with cheer all the time, takes a more complacent view of the military situation and does not regard every reverse as meaning that the conflict has ended in German victory.

To this second group much comfort has been brought by the army officers just back from the French front. They have returned with a supreme confidence in the ultimate defeat of Germany and have knocked down some preconceived notions of officials in Washington as to what was going on in the theatre of war. If any note of pessimism is found in what they say, it is in the horror over present methods of warfare. Treachery on the part of the Germans, cruel treatment of prisoners, and a merciless disregard of all the rules of chivalry have produced a situation where French and British troops know that when they have hand-to-hand encounters with the Germans it is to be a battle to the death. Surrender either means slaughter or worse. All the old-time consideration for the bravery of a foe has disappeared, and American troops will have to abandon any notion that war still has some romance or that mutual respect for courage among contestants still prevails. The Germans have destroyed all this.

Task Ahead of America.

As to the military situation, from a strategic point, however, the American officers are not cast down. They realize fully that a long, hard struggle is still ahead of the Allies and that the American forces will be obliged to do a great share of the work, with consequent heavy casualties. But that Germany cannot win is more than ever apparent to their minds. They have supreme confidence that the French and British line cannot be pierced by the Germans. They also believe that the German line is not impregnable and must give way before the assaults of the allied armies.

After interviewing all the officers who made the inspection tour in France, Secretary Baker has become imbued with the optimism imported from the war area, an optimism that had been lacking in certain quarters here lately. According to observers the pessimistic note has been given by visitors from abroad, each of whom has had his own little tale of woe, which tales in the aggregate overshadowed the great outstanding facts of allied gains and German reverses. That Germany is in a bad way economically is now generally understood among the well-informed, and while German agents are seeking to create an impression that more than two million reserves are yet available to the Kaiser, it is the belief of those who have superior means of obtaining information that Germany has exhausted her reserve strength in men and cap-

AMERICA'S WAR NOW, SAYS BORAH

WANTS OUR AIMS STATED

Believes People Should Be Apprised of Terms and Conditions for Which We Are Fighting.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—In an impassioned speech in the Senate today Senator Borah of Idaho sounded a warning that Americans were too complacent over the part their country was playing in this war, and that they must awaken to the stern reality that America faced a grave peril.

Senator Borah challenged the cry that America was fighting for the democratization of Europe. He insisted that the United States was waging war now for the preservation of its own democracy, and that this fact must be unmistakably impressed upon all Americans.

"There is no longer a European war; it is an American war," cried Senator Borah. And he urged that Americans view the struggle as if the enemy were at her own gates. He insisted that the time to talk peace was not at hand and would not come until Germany was vanquished. And Germany, he said, will not be conquered until America has thrown the whole force of her power into the conflict.

Senator Borah made his speech during the debate on the Rivers and Harbors bill, cautioning the Senate not to spend time in the passage of measures that did not vitally affect the one interest of America winning the war.

"There never has been a time in this struggle from the first of August, 1914, until this present hour when the outlook was so serious and menacing to the Allies as it is at this time," he said. "There has never been an instant so calculated to call forth patriotism and enlist the unselfish effort of those who have to do with the guiding of their country's affairs as this present time. Russia has, for all practical purposes at this hour passed out of the conflict. Her internal difficulties have made it practically impossible for her to be of effect upon the fighting line between the allied powers upon the one side and the Central powers upon the other. That tremendous body of people upon whom all interested in this war upon the side of the Allies depended so much and from whom they expected so much, has by reason of the situation at home practically left the fighting line.

Means Millions of Lives.

"What does that mean to the people of the United States? Could a more serious message come over the wires at any time, one involving more nearly the lives of millions of our boys than the fact that Russia is breaking down? If there is any power to be exerted in prayer, the American people may well offer up a prayer at this hour for the guidance and preservation and success of Kerensky. If this gallant leader, standing at the head of his disorganized forces, meets either the assassins' bullets or failure, it means a leaven which will disorganize and demoralize the situation beyond any power that language could portray.

"It means, Mr. President, that in all probability a million American boys in addition, will find graves upon European soil. No more serious situation, Sir, could confront a war condition than that which confronts the Allies at this hour. It may not be considered, in the minds of some, wise to say so, but the situation is here, and the best thing that the American people can know is the fact that the situation is here, and that the hour of sacrifice has arrived, and being here, will the Senate of the United States

M'ADOO GIVES ESTIMATES

Proposal to Spend Half of Army Budget for Forts Causes Surprise.

BILL MAY BE 10 BILLIONS

BIGGER ARMY TO EUROPE

Pay Item of Nearly $750,000,000 Indicates Million Men Will Go in Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Secretary McAdoo formally submitted to the Speaker of the House today the estimates for additional appropriations amounting to more than $5,000,000,000 for the army. The estimates are entitled "deficiency and supplemental estimates, War Department, for fiscal year ending June 30, 1918."

In addition to the War Department estimates totaling another $1,000,000,000 or more are expected tomorrow when the other departments report their needs. Secretary McAdoo has indicated that before the year is out Congress will be asked for a $2,000,000,000 appropriation to increase the fund available for loans abroad, so that the war budget to carry the Government through to next July and to include credits to the Allies promises to exceed $8,000,000,000, and may mount to $10,000,000,000.

Although the estimates do not go into details regarding the plans of the War Department and these plans will probably not become public even during debates on the forthcoming deficiency bill, Secretary McAdoo lists the lump sum amounts required for the several activities of the army. The greatest item is that of $2,468,613,000 for "armament of fortifications." This represents approximately one-half of the record-breaking request for war expenditures.

The magnitude of the estimate for fortifications indicates that the War Department has the most comprehensive plans for making this country safe from attack. The appropriations for fortifications heretofore have been comparatively modest. The totals of such budgets have run ordinarily from $16,000,000 to $25,000,000 per annum. When a sixty odd million dollar bill was put through at the last session it was regarded as a most liberal measure. The request at this time for more than two billion dollars for armament of fortifications both alarms and staggers members of Congress.

In the minds of some members there has arisen the conviction that the War Department is preparing either for an extraordinarily long war or proposes now to make the coasts of this country invulnerable for years to come.

That the War Department is preparing to send fully a million men to Europe within the current fiscal year is the conclusion which may be drawn from another large item in the supplemental estimates. This calls for nearly three-quarters of a billion dollars for "pay, &c., of the army." An additional sum of $520,000,000 is wanted for subsistence of the army. These sums are in addition to the regular army supply bills and the emergency appropriation of $5,000,000,000 authorized two months ago for the army and navy, the army getting the bulk of the lump sum appropriation.

The grand total of the deficiency estimates submitted today by Secretary McAdoo is $5,275,753,756.08. Supplemental estimates, submitted evidently as a matter of record, call for $642,124,591, but it is explained in a footnote that of this amount, $339,241,452, was made available in the aviation bill recently signed by the President, this latter amount included in the supplemental estimates is for the signal service. This leaves only about $2,000,000 to be appropriated, and this is desired for the extension of barracks, buildings and grounds, salaries, acquisition of land and other military incidentals.

The items in the estimates going to make up the $5,275,000,000 (in round figures,) concerning which Secretary McAdoo made a statement to the Senate Committee on Finance, and which he promised to submit in regular form to Congress, are as follows:

How much of the new war expenses should be raised by taxation and how much by bonds or Treasury indebtedness certificates is a warmly debated question. Secretary McAdoo may advise personally with the Finance Committee on the subject. Committee sentiment tonight seemed to be in favor of increasing the $1,670,600,000 War Tax bill only to about $2,000,000,000 with authorization both for a new bond issue, possibly at a higher interest rate and in serial form, and for issuance of Treasury certificates of indebtedness.

Secretary McAdoo is said to favor a much larger levy of taxes, and a few committeemen favor increasing the bill's total by $1,000,000,000 or at least to $2,225,000,000.

Whether the interest rate on the new bonds shall be increased also is causing much discussion. Some committee leaders fear it may be necessary to issue 4 per cent. securities. Such action also would increase the 3½ per cent. rate on the recent issue of Liberty bonds, as the law provides that it bonds subsequently issued shall bear a higher rate the first issue also shall bear the increased rate. There is a strong sentiment that the new bonds shall be in serial form, instead of running for twenty years.

As to the sources of the new taxes, sentiment in the committee apparently is tending toward securing the bulk of the increase from war excess profits and incomes. Excises or consumption taxes and a few other minor new levies also are being considered.

SIAM FOLLOWED WILSON.

Moved by His State Papers to Enter War, W. H. Pitkin Declares.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., July 26.—Siam, proud of her neutrality in the world war, abandoned it to oppose the Teutonic invasion of the rights of small peoples and free peoples largely because of President Wilson's state letters on the German crisis, Wolcott H. Pitkin, adviser in foreign affairs to the Siamese Government, said today.

Mr. Pitkin, who is on leave of absence from his post, had just finished a long conference with the Siamese Minister at the Summer Legation here. The official advices from Siam, he said, did not greatly amplify The Associated Press dispatches regarding the declaration. They left still open the question of the extent of Siam's participation in the war, but this, in the opinion of Mr. Pitkin, will not be great.

"It may be that it will lead directly to releasing the troops which Great Britain has in Burma and the forces which France has retained in the French States, which adjoin Siam on the northwest and on the east, respectively, but there is little likelihood that Siam will send any soldiers into the European fields.

"Siam kept in touch with the attitude of other neutrals, following closely the letters of President Wilson and the long suffering of the United States, and the declaration of Siam, to my mind, came as a direct consequence of President Wilson's message to Congress and America's entry into the war."

SENATE TO VOTE ON PROHIBITION AUG. 1

"WETS" PREDICT DEFEAT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The Senate agreed today to vote next Wednesday afternoon on the resolution of Senator Sheppard of Texas, proposing to the States a constitutional amendment for nation-wide prohibition. General agreement was reached after Senator Sheppard had sounded sentiment on both sides of the Chamber. Under unanimous consent agreement the resolution will come up for debate on Monday morning, each Senator being limited to one hour of debate, speaking only once, until Wednesday, when a ten-minute limit on speeches will be in effect.

Senator Sheppard, highly elated over the general consent agreement, said tonight that he was confident that the resolution would be adopted. But among the "wets" in the Senate the prediction was made that the resolution would be defeated. It will require a two-thirds vote to put it through. Senator Sheppard says he has sixty-six votes promised, or two more than the necessary number. He has prepared an amendment to his resolution providing that unless it is ratified by the States within six years after adoption the resolution shall die automatically. This will be resisted by some of the "wets," who insist that four years is sufficient time.

To adopt the Constitutional amendment would require the votes of three-fourths of the States. There are now twenty-five "dry" States. Advocates of nation-wise prohibition must hold all of these in line and gain eleven more if they are eventually to win the "bone-dry" fight. All the "wets" have to do in order to defeat the amendment, should the resolution be adopted by Congress, will be to hold thirteen of the States now in the "wet" column. It was pointed out today that among the twenty-five "dry" States there were some that might not vote for nation-wide prohibition, the liquor issue in those States being merely a local one.

In agreeing to the general consent arrangement Senators Underwood, on the Democratic side, and Penrose, on the Republican, explained that they would vote against the resolution on Wednesday.

"I do not want to block consideration of the resolution," said Senator Underwood. "I understand the majority of the Senate want the matter disposed of, and that is why I am willing to have it come to a vote."

"My reasons are exactly the same as those of the Senator from Alabama," said Senator Penrose. "I simply want the resolution voted on. I do not think this is the time to pass drastic legislation."

Senator Sheppard's resolution reads:

"The manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for purposes of beverage purposes are hereby prohibited. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

3,200 COOKS ARE NEEDED.

Government Calls on Hotel Men to Aid the Army.

The United States Government will draft an army of some 650,000 men next week, and it needs cooks for them. The hotel men of the country have been asked to supply most of the 3,200 men required. Joseph Beifel, proprietor of the Hotel Sherman of Chicago, has been asked by Quartermaster General Sharpe to see that the cooks have breakfast ready on the first day the members of the national army reach the cantonments. He in turn, it was announced last night, has named a hotel man for each of the sixteen cantonments. John McGlynn, President of the New York State Hotel Men's Association, will look out for the cantonment at Bridgeton, N. J., and L. M. Boomer, proprietor of the McAlpin, for the camp at Yaphank, L. I.

The cooks are to be divided into two classes—A and B. The men of Class A will be chefs who can act as instructors. The men of Class B will be those who merely can cook. Class A men will receive $125 a month, Class B men $90. The Hotel Association of New York City has undertaken to supply 240 cooks for Yaphank. The city is expected to supply 1,000 cooks in all for the new army.

UDINE THANKS PRESIDENT.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Telegrams exchanged between the Prince of Udine, who headed the Italian War Mission to the United States, and President Wilson, on the return of the former to Italy, were made public today by the State Department. Under date of July 15 the Prince stated that he had gone to Italian General Army Headquarters and personally reported to the King of Italy, his cousin, the results of the Italian mission's visit to this country. The message from the Prince to the President read as follows:

Rome, July 15, 1917.

On our arrival in Italy I and my colleagues of the mission are seized with the desire of expressing to you and the noble American Nation the sentiments of our deepest gratitude for the reception given us in the United States. Not later than yesterday we repaired to the General Headquarters and reported to the King the results of our visit and the reception extended to us in your country.

We believe that we are faithfully voicing his sentiments in saying that not only has he appreciated all the courtesies lavished upon us, but he is full of admiration for the great effort which, under your wise guidance, the United States is putting forth in the cause of civilization and humanity. Engaged in this war for the same ends, united in the same ideals, the United States and Italy are now forging ahead to the same goal of greatness and progress.

We shall never forget the reception that awaited us in the United States of America. It has echoed far and wide in our country, and has left in our souls a memory that nothing will efface. May the humane understanding mapped out in your message, Mr. President, be accomplished. My colleagues and I cannot express our earnest and deep sympathy better than in this wish.

FERDINANDO DI SAVOIA,
Prince of Udine.

President Wilson's reply to the Prince read:

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 21, 1917.

It is with a feeling of great satisfaction that I learn of the safe arrival of the Italian Commission in Italy, and I beg to express to your Highness the heartfelt pleasure which the Government and people of the United States have had in receiving you and the other members of your distinguished party, representatives of a great and friendly nation bound to this country by the strongest ties and fighting together in a great war for independence and justice.

I trust that you will retain memories of your visit as delightful as those you left with us, and I earnestly hope that at some future day I may have the pleasure of renewing our acquaintance.

I extend my best wishes for your future welfare and happiness.

WOODROW WILSON.

HOPE TO WIN OVER TURKEY.

Italians Also See Possibility of Detaching Bulgaria.

ROME, July 26.—The Italian press is displaying intense interest in the Paris conference of the Entente Allies, from the political viewpoint.

Italy's only concern in this connection, says the Giornale d'Italia, is to secure a permanent settlement of Balkan politics. It denies that any territorial expansion is desired by Italy in that direction and expresses hope that Italy's counsels will prevail regarding the possibility of a federation of the Balkan States on a just basis for the Serbs, the Rumanians, and the Bulgars, thus insuring future internal peace in the region and also a strong federation in opposition to the Central Empires.

The contention in many quarters here is that it is not too late now to win back not only Bulgaria, but particularly Turkey, to the Entente Allies.

EDUCATORS DISCUSS WAR.

Arrange for Speaking Campaign with National Security League.

Leading educators of the country met at the Hotel Astor yesterday and formulated plans for co-operation with the National Security League's campaign to arouse the people to a realization of the meaning of the war. Those present included Philander P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education; Dr. John H. Finley, Commissioner of Education of New York State; Dr. Henry N. MacCracken, President of Vassar College; Dr. Robert M. McElroy of Princeton, and Major Francis G. Landon of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense.

Dr. MacCracken explained the educational campaign which he has organized in this State in conjunction with the National Security League. Beginning Sept. 15, he is to send throughout the State ten teams of four speakers each.

The educators from other States declared they would organize similar campaigns.

DUTCH SHIPS HERE MUST NOW UNLOAD

Export Licenses Refused to 50 or More Which Have Been Waiting to Sail.

CARGOES OF FOOD SUPPLIES

Tonnage of Nearly 300,000 Affected Freight Must Be Discharged Promptly.

Between fifty and sixty cargo steamships flying the Dutch flag, which have been lying in New York Harbor several weeks waiting for permission to sail for Rotterdam and Amsterdam, will now have to discharge their cargoes because export licenses have been refused to their local agents by the Bureau of Domestic and Foreign Commerce at Washington under the embargo law.

This action has been taken because it was suspected by the Federal Government that the cargoes of flour, grain, oil cake, lard, and bacon would be used in Holland to replace Dutch products that had been previously sold to Germany at high prices. The oil cake was intended to be used in feeding Dutch cattle, it was said, in order that quantities of cheese and butter could be obtained for sale in Germany.

The total tonnage detained in the harbor amounts to nearly 300,000. Demurrage is mounting to such an extent that the owners are compelled to unload promptly.

Most of the vessels were held here by the British Admiralty waiting for letters of assurance to be received in London from the Dutch Government to the effect that none of the wheat or other foodstuffs in their holds would be used for the relief of Germany. As the time approached for the American embargo law to come into operation about thirty-two of the steamships flying the flag of the Netherlands moved up into the North River as high as 155th Street and anchored, as their agents had given up all hope of getting away to Holland with their cargoes.

It has been stated that Holland offered to give up a certain amount of her tonnage to carry foodstuffs for the Belgian Relief Commission if she were allowed to bring her grain ships from America, and that the British Admiralty refused the offer.

Just before the Embargo act took effect eleven ships flying the Dutch flag sailed from an American port and are now at Halifax awaiting the orders of the British Admiralty to proceed. The agent of one of the big Dutch lines in New York said yesterday that none of his company's vessels, more than twenty-five in all, would attempt to leave under such conditions, because going from New York to be ordered into Halifax was like going from the frying pan into the fire.

On account of the congestion at the piers in New York Harbor, all of these vessels will have to discharge into lighters in the river and in the upper and lower bay, which will take a long time, on account of the scarcity of lighters and tugboats and the difficulty of procuring labor. At the present time the longshoremen charge $1 an hour for working on ships down the bay, and frequently earn $24 from midnight Saturday to midnight Sunday on ships which take in cargoes after leaving their piers.

SCANDINAVIAN EMBARGO TIGHT

Some Cargoes for Dutch and Swiss Are Still Being Licensed.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Information here tonight is to the effect that the Exports Council has placed a complete embargo on the shipment of fodder, grains, and other war time commodities to Norway, Sweden, and Denmark, pending further diplomatic negotiations. It is stated that some, but not all, cargoes are being licensed for Holland, and that Switzerland, of all the neutrals which might feed Germany, is being treated with the greatest leniency.

The State Department has communicated with all the neutrals, explaining at length the attitude of this Government in connection with shipments to the neutral countries contiguous to Germany. It has been reported that the United States was preparing to put these countries on rations, and that the embargo on exports to the Scandinavian countries would remain in effect until these plans were perfected.

It was admitted at the State Department today that Holland and the Scandinavian countries were continuing their commerce in foodstuffs with Germany. These neutral countries, it was also learned, are not yet suffering as a result of the denial to them of foodstuffs from the United States.

Officials decline to indicate how long the embargo will last, but there is a belief that the resources of the neutral countries affected are sufficient to support them for a considerable time. This fact gives the United States a fair opportunity to take stock of its food supplies and also to check up on the available supplies in the neutral countries desiring to purchase here.

The State Department has asked all the European neutrals to furnish it with information concerning their supplies of foodstuffs, and some of them have submitted figures, but others professed not to have them. The Swiss Government has organized a special body for the control of imports, and satisfactory guarantees have been given by Switzerland that commodities bought in America will not be re-exported to Germany. France and Switzerland have negotiated an agreement by which Switzerland enjoys a free port in France. The arrangement prescribes the quantity of Swiss products that may be exported to Germany in exchange for German coal. The statistics furnished by the other neutral countries will be compared by the Exports Council with the figures in its possession and others furnished by the allied Governments. It was thought probable today that there would be no settlement of the exports problem satisfactory to America until the neutrals entered into "air-tight" agreements with this country respecting their trade with Germany.

When the export problem is worked out it is expected that the British Government will discontinue the issuance of letters of assurance to cover American exports for which export licenses are issued by this country.

OUR ARTISTS AT THE FRONT.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 26.—For the first time since the beginning of the war American artists received official permission to make drawings at the front. Although one or two prominent French painters have been allowed to approach the firing line the privilege has been jealously withheld from others hitherto. Now two Americans, Waldo Pierce of Bangor, Maine, and Eben Given of Chicago, have been notified they have the right under the auspices of the American Red Cross to tour the French front in an automobile unrestricted even by the presence of a French officer as is the case with newspaper correspondents.

Pierce, an ex-Harvard football guard, has studied at Julien's in Paris and more recently with the Spanish master Zuloaga, being the only pupil the latter ever received. He has exhibited at the Salon here and in New York. He spent two years in the American Ambulance in the famous Section Three, engaged in the Vosges offensive in December, 1915, and which was the first American section sent to Verdun. For his brilliant services therein Pierce was decorated with the War Cross.

While Pierce is chiefly known as a portraitist, Given has specialized in battle pictures and war subjects as applied to interior decoration. An imposing picture by Pierce, illustrating the American Red Cross work in France, has been hung in the private room of Grayson Murphy at Red Cross headquarters here.

'PORK' BILL PASSES BY VOTE OF 50 TO 11

River and Harbor Appropriation of $25,000,000 Wins in Senate After 4 Days' Fight.

$1,250,000 FOR EAST RIVER

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—After a bitter debate lasting four days the River and Harbor bill, carrying an appropriation of $25,000,000, was passed by the Senate tonight by the vote of 50 to 11. The opposing Senators were Ashurst, Gore, King, Shafroth, Democrats, and Borah, Brady, Kenyon, La Follette,, Smith of Michigan, and Smoot, Republicans.

All day the bill had been attacked by its opponents as a "piece of reckless extravagance," an "indefensible measure," or a "rank hypocrisy." Senator Kenyon of Iowa led the fight against it on the Republican side, Senator King of Utah taking up the cudgels against it on the Democratic side, both assailing it as a measure intended only to serve the purposes of the "pork barrel."

Senator Kenyon made futile attempts to have an amendment adopted to put power exclusively in the hands of the President to expend the money appropriated and to confine expenditures to projects directly related to the war. Another amendment by Senator Kenyon, which was also defeated, provided for an appropriation of $15,000,000 instead of $25,000,000, and to confine the expenditures to war projects.

Before final vote was taken, Senator King made one last assault upon it, saying that it was "iniquitous" and "enough to make the American people ashamed."

"The existing system of fixing these 'pork-barrel appropriations is vicious," declared Senator King. "This bill is a rank hypocrisy. It is beyond expression. It is not a war bill, as its advocates have tried to tell us. It's just the same old scheme to loot the Treasury in behalf of unworthy objects. I intend to fight as long as I am in the Senate against such scandalous legislation as this."

Senator King commended Senator Kenyon "in having exposed the glaring outrages of the bill." The Iowa Senator, he said, had analyzed various appropriations, showing clearly that they were only intended to provide "political spoils for the sponsors of the measue."

Among the few changes made by the Senate in the bill as it came from the House was authorization to the Secretary of the Navy to condemn and take over the Cape Cod Canal. The House provision to similarly take over the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal was retained.

Appropriations in the bill affecting York Harbor, $90,000; improvement of York Harbor, $90,000; improvement of the Hudson River channel, $810,000; to deepen the East River from Hell Gate to the Brooklyn Navy Yard, $1,250,000.

defeat the purpose for which the great nations entered and had continued the war and that it did not turn to waste the immeasurable loss and suffering which they had shared and were sharing.

He welcomed the news that a conference would be held early in the Autumn on the invitation of the Russian Government. Nothing but good could come of a plain restatement of the Allies' aims in a good cause. Two new facts of the present year, first, that Russia had ceased forever to be autocratic, and, second, the appearance, with all her moral and material forces, of the United States in the struggle, had a direct and practical bearing upon the opinion of the world as to the sincerity of the Allies' aims.

"They mean," continued the former Premier, "that the allied nations now include an overwhelming majority of the free peoples of the world. The Allies are fighting for nothing but freedom and nothing short of freedom. That is the policy of this great and unprecedented aggregation of free peoples.

"Earnestly as we desire peace, no peace is worth having which would restore, under some thin disguise, the precarious status quo ante bellum and would leave countries like Belgium, Serbia, and Greece at the mercy of dynastic intrigue or under the menace of military coercion. It would be premature and futile to grapple in detail with the geographical problems eventually to be solved.

"The principle clearly agreed to by every one of the Allies is that in any rearrangement made the governing principle ought to be the interests and the wishes of the populations affected. But is that principle acceptable to the Central powers? Is Germany prepared not only to evacuate Belgium, but to make reparation for the colossal mischief and damage which accompanied her devastating occupation and the practical enslavement of a large portion of the Belgium people? Is she prepared not only to do that, but to restore to Belgium, not a pretence of, but absolute independence?

"I should like to know the German answer to these questions. I find no answer in the vague, indeterminate formulae of the Reichstag. I have no desire to say that peace is impossible, but I cannot see from what has recently occurred in Berlin any real approximation of a practical kind to the aims and objects of the Allies."

Mr. Asquith thought that the German people were the greatest obstacle to peace, but said that was a matter for the German people themselves. So far as the Allies were concerned the best hope of peace, he said, was a frank and open statement, both by way of avowal and disavowal of objects for which they were fighting, and as a means to that end he welcomed the fullest use of all opportunities for an interchange of views among representatives of the great democracies. It could not be too clearly stated that this was a matter for the peoples, rather than the Governments.

"Once that is realized by the democracies of the world," continued the former Premier, "we shall be within measurable sight of an honorable and lasting peace. Meanwhile we shall not be helping the advent of peace if we give the impression that there is any faltering in our determination or doubt in our ability to carry on the burden. We look up with clear conscience until our ends are achieved."

George James Wardle, Chairman of the Labor Party in the House, speaking in behalf of his party, frankly agreed with Mr. Asquith's remarks and said that he was unable to support the resolution. The Reichstag did not represent the German people, and any negotiations could only be with the German Government. Therefore an international Socialist conference would be useless. He saw no sign of repentence on the part of the German Socialist majority, nor any desire to come to such an understanding as the movers of the resolution suggested.

Andrew Bonar Law, the Government leader, also opposing the resolution, said that if the views of the movers of the resolution were right, then this country had been guilty of the greatest crime ever committed in the history of the world. He contended that it was useless to base anything upon the resolution passed by the Reichstag, which did not have the smallest power. Germany never had stated her aims because she knew she would be found out directly she put her peace terms down in black and white.

The speech of Bonar Law dealt largely with the Russian crisis. He said that the nations engaged were staggering under the blow, but that the resources of the Allies were sufficient to make it absolutely certain that, unless their hearts failed them, they must secure the results for which they had entered the war. The struggle had reached a point where it was a question of staying power, and in this matter he had absolute confidence in the Allies. He was equally certain that if anything could delay peace it would be any sign of faltering.

Philip Snowden, Socialist, said the debate disclosed that the British Government, more than any other belligerent, was standing in the way of an early settlement. He protested against more blood being shed to restore Alsace-Lorraine to France.

Says We Are Fighting for Greed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, July 27.—The Daily Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondent, describing the peace debate in the Commons, says Bonar Law's military tone drew from Snowden an impassioned speech which called forth many angry cries of protest.

"Characteristic of Snowden's perversity of mind," says the correspondent, "was his reply to the query, 'Why did America enter the war?' His answer was: 'Ask the capitalists and financiers of the United States.' This monstrous innuendo so dishonoring to President Wilson was very keenly resented by the House."

WILL SEND DELEGATES.

Socialist Party Decides to Take Part in London Conference.

CHICAGO, July 26.—The Executive Committee of the National Socialist Party has decided to send delegates to the Socialist conference of the allied countries to be held in London Aug. 8 and to a Socialist conference in Russia, it was announced tonight by Adolph Germer, Secretary of the party. Notices have been sent to all local committees to begin the election of delegates at once.

The American Federation of Labor also has been asked to name delegates to the London conference, Mr. Germer said. He quoted a letter received yesterday from J. Ramsay MacDonald, Secretary of the United Socialist Council of Great Britain, asking that the Socialists divide their delegations with the American Federation of Labor.

The Socialist Party will ask that the London conference be set for a later date than Aug. 8.

ard basis list at 100 per cent. above the old price list as a means of preventing prices from declining when the supply again overtakes the demand. The commission has ordered proceedings commenced against said association to prevent the continuance of its illegal activities."

Looks Into Cost of Coal.

Determination of the cost of producing coal is progressing rapidly, according to another statement authorized by the Federal Trade Commission.

A large number of expert accountants are busy at the task of ascertaining coal costs in the different localities. The statement follows:

"The report that will be sent to the President will be based on careful cost determination of wages, maintenance, overhead, and material charges. Depreciation is carefully considered, as are investment and other factors. Due attention is being paid to the primary factor of maintenance of maximum production.

"The work entails careful study of many sets of books, and inspection at the mines frequently of special factors bearing on costs. As the reports come to the commission the information is correlated, and each report is carefully analyzed and checked up. All apparent exceptions are investigated.

"The result will be that when the report is sent to the President it will have been done with such complete thoroughness that a 'fair and just' price can be determined on the basis of the cost determination. It is the cost determination only, not the price determination, that the commission is concerned with."

The Federal Trade Commission is the agency to which President Wilson intrusted the task of determining the cost of production of steel, coal, and other commodities, so that a fair price to the Government and to the consuming public might be determined. All of these investigations are now in progress, including an analysis of the food situation.

PRICE OF FLAGS FALLING.

Manufacturers Say the Government Bought Up Wool Bunting.

Flagmakers here were indignant yesterday over the report of the Federal Trade Commission accusing them of fixing flag prices at what was termed an "indefensibly high level." A large share of the blame for the high cost of flags, they maintained, should be laid on the Government, which had gone into the market for wool bunting on its own account.

"There are two mills in the United States which supply all of the wool bunting now used in flag manufacture," said a flagmaker yesterday. "These mills have simply been unable to meet the demand for the bunting. The Government has bought about two-thirds of the wool bunting for the manufacture of battle flags for army and navy and for signal flags. This factor has contributed more than anything else to raising the price of flags. We used to get a roll of wool bunting for $5, now that roll costs $15 or $16. And it must also be remarked that while the price of flags was very high when the Trade Commission made its investigation last April, the investigation on which they base this report, that price has fallen considerably since then. It has fallen, first because we are not so badly off now as we were then in the matter of material, though we are still short of wool to meet our orders. Then, it must be remembered, that when war was declared last April, everybody wanted a flag, and a lot of people went to making flags on an unlimited profit who had never made a flag before. Cloak and suitmakers, and those in the waist trade started making flags. People would pay anything, and so they charged them anything."

It was denied that there was anything like a price-fixing agreement among flagmakers. The Flagmakers' Association in New York, of which Spencer Turner of Turner-Halsey at 62 Leonard Street is President, is described as an organization designed to "promote goodfellowship" rather than to do anything to restrain trade or fix prices.

not send reinforcements to either front.

No disposition exists here to minimize the apparent fact that the Spring offensive of the French and British forces has been a failure. But there is so much confidence in American vim and vigor that officials are confident that a new order of things will be inaugurated when any considerable force of American troops has been concentrated on the French front. In this connection it is betraying no confidence to say that the German General Staff will be surprised when it learns that the United States has already placed in France not merely a contingent of troops of the line, but thousands of skilled men, who are already doing construction work that will begin to tell when the American troops join in the fighting.

Cannot Go Far Into Russia.

The Russian situation does not worry officials as much as might be supposed. There is a feeling of complacence among certain of the best informed officers of the Government that Germany's offensive against the Russians will become weaker as the Russians fall back. Even among the most pessimistic military observers it is admitted that the Russian situation, from a military standpoint, is not approaching a crisis. Germany has tried on several occasions to force Russia out of the war, it was said today, and each time she has failed. Military experts are agreed that as long as Russia remains in the war Germany will be obliged to maintain enormous forces on the Eastern front. Germany, it was pointed out, lacks sufficient troops to penetrate Russia far enough to compel that country to seek peace.

Altogether the situation at the moment when the United States is preparing to take an active part in the war with all the resources at its command presents a favorable aspect. Nobody in authority here shuts his eyes to the knowledge that once the American troops get into action the country will wake to a shocking realization of what modern warfare means. But the Government is prepared to fight with all the vigor of which its great resources of men and money make it capable, and is not blind to the knowledge of the great task ahead of it.

If any general note of criticism is found in the capital, it is that the Government should adopt measures to stir the people in the effort to make them understand that this is their war and not a war conducted in confidence.

stop and parley, Sir, over the money going into this creek, Fish Creek, Tombigbee Creek, or some other creek?

"Will the American Senate delay for a single hour in cutting away all unnecessary and idle things which impede progress and meet this situation as it is absolutely necessary for us to meet it in order to solve the problem? It is no longer a European war, Sir; it is an American war, and with that condition of affairs confronting us it is necessary that we proceed to legislate here upon these respective measures as if the enemy were at our gates.

"Mr. President, something was said a few days ago in the Senate about peace. Peace was discussed. This is not an appropriate time generally to discuss peace or to propose peace, if we propose to have that peace which is permanent, and we can do it with an enemy that is apparently marching on to victory. Does any one suppose that Germany at this hour could consider any proposition of peace other than the peace which takes care of Germany's interest as Germany alone sees that interest? Does any one suppose that the Central Powers, with Russia crazing in, with the submarine war growing stronger and more effective apparently every day, with France apparently at the height of her fighting power and not able in all probability to go beyond the point which she now holds; with these conditions presented to the German mind does any one suppose that we could discuss peace with them upon any basis whatever other than terms Germany would practically dictate?

Wants Our Aims Stated.

"No, Mr. President, we have not arrived yet at the time when we can discuss peace with these powers against which we are arrayed as enemies, but I think this much ought to be said, lest I be misunderstood. I am not so sure but that the time has come when the American people should have presented to them more definitely and specifically the terms and conditions upon which we are fighting the war, and the terms and conditions upon which we would cease to fight it. I believe there ought to be laid before the American people a more specific program as to what we propose to attain, as to what we propose to accomplish and as to the terms and conditions upon which the war so far as America is concerned, can end, and upon those terms and conditions only.

"I say that, sir, not with the view of having Germany accept from us at this time any proposition which we might submit, but I say it for the purpose of arousing the interest of the American people and of permitting them to know definitely and specifically the things for which they are expected to fight and the things for which they are expected to die. We cannot carry on this war, in my judgment, without a thoroughly aroused and sustained public opinion in favor of the war, which does not at this time exist, and one of the reasons, in my opinion, why it does not exist is because of the nebulous and uncertain terms and conditions upon which we are supposed to be in the war and the utter want of knowledge as to what conditions will take us out of the war.

"Mr. President, René Viviani, in that remarkable address of his bidding farewell to the American people, told us that the great mistakes which the German Government had made was in not understanding or knowing the French and English people; that Germany sent her ambassadors to France and to England to study government and practice the arts of diplomacy, but that they wholly failed to understand the virtues of the English and the French peoples.

Avoid the Same Mistake.

"Let us not make that same fatal mistake as a Government with reference to our own people. Let us bear in mind that the ways of Government and the arts of diplomacy are often far from the industrial lines down which a people march to war. The Government and diplomacy may be interested in Constantinople or the Bagdad Railroad; but out yonder in the open, where every move toward war means toil and suffering, where families are to be separated and roken up, where fathers and brothers and sons and husbands are to be offered upon the altar—that altar must be our country. You must speak to them of things at home and of the flag. You must give them an American issue for which to die.

"After the declaration of war has been made and those other steps taken which necessarily follow, then you come to deal with another world entirely. You leave the world of form and formality and enter at once into the world of the concrete, of the real, where men prepare to suffer and die and where hearts throb with grief. From that time forward you must deal with the man on the street, in the factories, in the field, the man of simple but fixed and noble national instinct; the man, bless God, in whose intellectual and moral fibre are ingrained the teachings and the traditions and the aspirations of a century of national life.

America Not a Satellite.

"You cannot change these things overnight. The American citizen must live his character. You cannot transplant in a few weeks the ideas and ideals, the methods and ways, the customs and habits, and the interests of other nations. We may have our allies and with them a common purpose; but America is still America, with her own individuality, with her separate and distinct and noble institutions, with the intellectual and moral conceptions of her own people. She is still a sun and not a satellite.

"If this war does not involve our institutions, if the security and dignity and safety of our own democracy is not involved, if we are not fighting this war for the defense of our own rights and for the protection of our own citizens, then this declaration of war was a bold and impudent betrayal of the rights of the whole nation, and its continuance for a single hour is a conspiracy against every home in the land."

"I understand from the Senator's remarks," interrupted Senator Poindexter of Washington, "that he is of the opinion that any attempt to arrive at such a basis of peace as he is now advocating, would be perfectly futile because of the victorious position Germany is in. If that is true, does it not follow necessarily that the only peace basis upon with the United States can proceed, is to change that victorious position of Germany?"

"Of course that constitutes the issue," replied Senator Borah. "That is what I am talking about. The Senator is greatly in error if he supposes that I advocate peace on any basis. I have simply advocated that the American people be advised as to the issues in this war from the American standpoint, and the issues which would have to be determined from the American standpoint before this war is closed."

Senator Poindexter said he assumed from the remarks of Senator Borah that the latter felt that but for the United States having entered the war Germany would be "completely victorious."

"Assuming that is the case," pursued Senator Poindexter, "the American people would have very little difficulty in finding out what the issue of the war really was. It seems to follow as a very obvious deduction that if Germany conquers Europe, as the Senator apprehends she would do but for the presence of the United States in the war, Germany, through the consolidation of resources of England and France, with a navy far superior to ours, could transfer the war from the plains of France to the territory of the United States, and we would then have an issue that the youngest child in the land could understand. We would have to fight this war then on our own territory. It would be a defensive war. Some people are not in favor of sending our soldiers abroad, but seem to prefer that the situation I have described should come about. They are short-sighted."

Thinks Public Is Muddled.

"I say," resumed Senator Borah, "that this is an American war, as the Senator has just said, but I say that is not the manner in which it heretofore has been presented to the American people.

"We have been supposed to be fighting for the rehabilitation of certain nations in Europe, for the redistribution of European territory, for the establishment of democracy, and for humanity, and for this and that in Europe, and so forth. But the peril which confronts the American people, immediate and imminent, has not been presented to the American people. And the Senator's correspondence, if it is like mine, will disclose that the American people do not understand it.

"I venture to say that, if the American people realized that this is an American war in the sense that it would be if France and England should break down, the Senate would not be sitting here passing upon the advisability of appropriating millions for creeks on which ducks couldn't float. There is no better proof anywhere to be found that we have not yet realized that this is an American war, and that we are fighting for our own institutions than the method in which we are doing business here in the Senate at this time."

Senator Fletcher of Florida, in charge of the River and Harbor bill, interrupted to ask Senator Borah to particularize as to items in the measure which he had characterized as "trivial." The Idaho Senator retorted that Senator Kenyon of Iowa had sufficiently pointed them out in a four-hour speech in the Senate yesterday and that it must be evident to all the Senators that the bill was loaded down with "indefensible items of wasteful expenditure."

"In this bill," said Senator Borah, "its framers have aggregated and collected together these questionable items, and in my humble judgment it was done for the specific purpose of covering up those which are indefensible. I think there are many items in here which are absolutely indefensible.

"As I said a moment ago, if our institutions, our country, our liberties are not involved, this declaration of war was wrong. And yet I venture to say that you may go before a popular audience in this country anywhere, and they will say to you that thus far this war has been treated as a European war to settle and establish certain principles of government in Europe with reference to certain propositions on that Continent.

Favors Russia's Terms.

"Let me call your attention to an illustration. A few weeks ago Russia made a declaration in favor of peace based upon no indemnities and no annexations. It found no response from any one of her allies. In my humble judgment the United States could not have taken a more important and effective step than to have indorsed that proposition which Russia at that time put out to the world. It is my opinion that if the United States had taken the bold stand at that time in favor of that same principle, Russia would be 100 per cent. in better condition as a fighting force today than she is; but the impression has gone abroad that certain influences prevented the United States from defining its position, waiting upon other powers which were directing the course of the war.

"Mr. President, I can only speak for myself, and myself alone. But speaking for myself I did not vote for war out of sympathy for France, much as I sympathize with and greatly as I admire that brave and chivalrous people. I voted for war because our own people had been murdered and because we were warned that the slaughter was to be renewed. Under that condition of affairs I could not see anything in the future other than continued wrongs and outrages, humiliation, and a complete national degradation. I didn't vote for war, Sir, to spread democracy throughout Europe, although in common with my countrymen I presume I should be glad to see every King and Emperor and Prince exiled from among men, and the last vestige of dynastic power swept into the refuse of history. I voted for war to make safe our own blessed republic, to give dignity and honor and security of this democracy of ours. I believed that self-respect was indispensable to the life of a democracy; that while other nations might continue on in humiliation and degradation, a democracy without self-respect could not long endure.

"I believed that a republic which

TO REUNITE ALL ITALIANS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 26.—The allied conference which opened yesterday will adhere to the original program of the Balkan question as the centre of its deliberations. While the leaders will naturally take the opportunity of discussing the general situation in relation to the recent events in Russia and Germany, it is semi-officially announced that nothing beyond an exchange of views is contemplated in that direction. Conviction is thus given to one of a crop of rumors circulated by pacifist propagandists to the effect that the Balkan question was merely a screen to hide a consultation in view of a speedy peace on the best terms possible.

Once the Balkan sky is cleared of the Greek stormcloud, it is obvious to the allied statesmen that the key to the whole problem must be sought in the Adriatic rather than in the Aegean Sea. Although America is not directly concerned, no question of such importance to the allied body can fail to interest us greatly. I have procured for publication in THE NEW YORK TIMES a statement made to Whitney Warren in this connection by an eminent Italian Admiral—made as a presentation of Italy's case before the American people:

"What meaning have the words Trentino, Trieste, Istria, Dalmatia, and Adriatic for the average American outside of their geographical acceptation? Judging by the vagueness of Italian knowledge regarding the particular problems of America, it is permitted to suppose, without offending any susceptibility, that in the United States the greater part of the nation ignores the vital problems of Italy. Yet when an entire people rushes to arms, fights, and dies uttering these words, when it raises them to the height of a symbol, then, besides the geographical signification, they have a wider meaning and express the spiritual and material aspirations of a whole race. They express sentiments and facts which every thinking Italian owes it to himself to explain to his friends and allies, to every man with a conscience, that they may judge rightly the acts and hopes and incontestable rights of a people struggling for the same ideals of humanity and justice for which America has taken up arms.

What War Means to Italy.

"I will explain the meaning of those five magical words which for Italians all over the world justify the confidence on which the life and action of new Italy are founded. Italy after long years of bondage has been able to reunite scattered pieces of her territory by wresting them away after long and bloody wars of independence from foreign usurpers. But Italy is not yet completely united and cannot feel secure as long as her gates remain open, as long as she has not brought back to her arms her sons still under the foreign yoke.

"In centuries of servitude we learned to suffer, but not to submit. We are fighting to complete our union, and rather than forego it we prefer to die. The Trentino and Trieste are doors to our home whereof the foreigner has taken possession that prevents us from closing them against robbers. If New York and San Francisco were occupied by Germans, would Americans have acted differently from the Italians? And what is represented by the Trentino and Trieste on land is represented by the Adriatic on the sea, for the sea frontiers of Italy are greater than her frontiers on land. By sea Italy breathes and lives. The Tyrhenian and the Adriatic are her two lungs. If you take a lung from a man he may not die immediately, but he will be phthisic. If you take the Adriatic from Italy she will die of phthisis.

"It is only necessary to glance at the map to see that without Dalmatia and the chain of islands along the coast Italy can never be secure on the Adriatic. Dalmatia and those islands belonged to Venice. By their possession she assured herself and Europe against the Turkish pirates in the sea. When Venice fell and Austria ravished the heritage of Saint Mark Italy was not yet freed from her long bondage. This heritage in the hands of the usurpers formed an integral and indivisible part of the great Italian motherland too feeble to break the bonds asunder.

Italian Civilization Destroyed.

"Everywhere Austria found traces of Italian culture on the coasts and among the islands. Ancient monuments and modern houses, churches of old and churches of today, language, customs, civilization—all is Latin, all part of the Italian motherland. But little by little Austria by persecution and confiscation replaced the Italians of these regions by Germans or Croatians from the interior. Our houses, our altars, our monuments are now occupied in great measure by foreigners of another tongue and another civilization, who do not realize what they have torn from us, who understand neither the language of our country nor its ruins. They only know they are there because there is the key to the sovereignty of the Adriatic. The Italians left in Dalmatia struggle still to save what remains of their country and invoke her aid, but their voices become more feeble as their numbers decrease. We must strike now, for soon it will be too late, our thousand-year-old Latin civilization will be abolished by these spoilers.

"To these reasons must be added another of military order. Our dreadnoughts are shut up in Tarento because we do not possess a harbor large or deep enough on the Adriatic to hold a large squadron, whereas Austria dominates the whole upper Adriatic from Pola, the middle Adriatic from Setenco and Spalato, the lower Adriatic down to Corfu from Cattaro, and every channel, every isle affords excellent shelter for a large and powerful fleet. Thus Austria can overcome the inferiority of her fleet to those of Italy, France, and England. At any moment she can bring out her vessels from any point of the magnificent coast she has stolen from us, and we have no port at all to harbor our big ships.

"I have spent all my life on the sea and now I have the honor to command all the mobilized naval forces of my country. I can therefore speak with full knowledge of the subject, as I base my arguments not on theory, but on experience. Whereas the Italian coast from Venice to Otranto is entirely lowlying, without ports, without anchorages, and wholly exposed to the north wind, the Curzolari Islands and Dalmatia offer vast and numerous points of refuge both from the enemy and from bad weather. No matter where the Austrian ship is in the Adriatic, she can always find shelter by steaming a few miles and reaching one of the numerous channels to the interior. But our vessels can only take refuge at Venice or Brindisi, our only natural naval ports. Brindisi and Venice are 800 miles apart and impracticable for great modern warships. So that the enemy can use the islands as a bridge between Dalmatia and Italy and cross it to attack us just as he can choose his own moment and withdraw before we can pursue him, because Brindisi and Venice are too distant for us to arrive in time. Besides, each lofty peak of the Curzolari Island mountains is an excellent signaling station to sweep the whole surrounding ocean. On the Italian side the reverse is the case; our view extends but a few miles.

Italy Demands No Conquests.

"For these reasons the words Dalmatia and Adriatic evoke the following thought in all Italians today. We cannot use the sea which bathes half of our country because all advantages are on the opposite coast. Austria was for many centuries without the Adriatic, yet she was powerful and prosperous because she was not a seafaring but essentially a continental nation. We, on the contrary, by our geographical situation are exclusively a maritime nation. We never have been able to live without the Adriatic, and now that we are threatened to be deprived of it forever we will fight for it to the death.

"Italy does not demand territorial conquests; she wants simply to get back what belongs to her, what is necessary for her existence. If we had nourished the idea of conquest would we not have joined our former allies to profit by the advantages they held out? A vast colonial empire, the riches of Corsica, Nice and Savoy—was not that a tempting bait for our ambition? And remember that at the time Italy entered the war everything pointed to a victory for the Central Powers. But these promises Italy preferred, the Carso, the Trentino and the Curzolari Islands. We're not waging a war of conquest, but struggling to turn out the intruder in our home, to deliver our own sons, to save Latin civilization.

"You Americans, why are you fighting? To conquer and destroy life and all that makes life worth living? No, you entered the war to contribute your part to the liberty of those who deserve it so that never again shall a war of greed and injustice be repeated. Those are the aspirations of Italy also, and we need America to help us free ourselves, to make us masters of our own house, to uphold with all her conscience our rights to the Trentino and Trieste, Dalmatia and the Curzolari Islands when the peace negotiations begin. Those are the only conditions for us of a real and lasting peace."

GREECE NEEDS OUR AID, DECLARES VENIZELOS

Convening of Parliament Means Resumption of Rule by the People, Premier Says.

ATHENS, July 26.—The Chamber of Deputies convened yesterday, heard Premier Venizelos read the decree of convocation, and then adjourned for a few days for the election of officers.

The meeting of parliament was signalized by a complete resumption of popular rule and the end of autocracy in Greece. King Alexander did not take part in the function, the speech from the Throne having been abandoned on the ground that it would involve criticism of a father by his son.

The Chamber presented a picturesque scene, with Greeks, Mussulmans, and Islanders dressed in their quaint native costumes. Premier Venizelos was acclaimed by a large majority of the Deputies. The new régime completely controls the situation and is in full accord and co-operating with the Entente.

On the eve of the assembling of Parliament Premier Venizelos received a correspondent of The Associated Press and made the following statement:

"The reassembling of Parliament, which was decised by the arbitrary action of Constantine, is the formal resumption of democratic government and the rule of the people, in line with the ideals and principles of which the United States gives a conspicuous example. No longer have we a royal autocrat ruling by the divine right of kings and not responsible to the people, but ratherf a constitutional monarchy in which authority is exercised within strict limits.

"We look o the United States for continuance of powerful support in working out our own destinies. Greece is now aligned with the Entente Allies. Relations with the Central Powers have been broken and a state of war now actually exists, as Greek troops are fighting against the Central Powers in Macedonia. A formal declaration of war was made by the Provisional Government, and it is unnecessary to renew it.

"The increase of the Greek army and co-operation with Serbia will restore the Balkan forces to their proper rôle of defenders of the integrity of the Balkans. France and the other protecting powers are leaving us a free hand, and the Allies recognize Greece's position as a covereign and independent nation."

CORFU, July 26.—The Serbian Government contemplates an early re-establishment of the seat of government on Serbian soil. The first move will be to Saloniki, where King Peter and Crown Prince Alexander and the Serbian Ministers of Finance and Interior already have established themselves. Th other members of the Government will follow soon and later the seat will be established in one of the Serbian provinces near Monastir, from which city the enemy has been expelled. The change is welcomed as the first move to reconstitute new Serbia.

GERMANS SUPREME IN AIR.

Electrician and Two Ambulance Drivers Say Allies Are Behind.

Arriving yesterday from France, Lee A. Warwick of the Westinghouse Electric Company said that he had spent several months behind the lines in France installing electric power in the reconquered districts.

"During my visit along the entire western front," Mr. Warwick said, "I have conversed with more than 100 French and British officers. They all agreed that the Germans have regained the supremacy of the air. These officers told me that what the United States could do to save the situation is to send over 1,000 airplanes at once, as the French have plenty of skilled airmen, but not enough machines. If America will send over 5000 airplanes before Jan. 1, it will do more good than the arrival of 100,000 troops by the same period."

J. G. Wells of St. Louis and F. T. Walker of Boston, who returned on the steamship with Mr. Warwick after driving ambulances at the French front for a year, confirmed Warwick's statements. They said the Germans had a new type of tri-plane of 240 horse power carrying a Benz motor, with two machine guns and an automatic rifle, which are manipulated by three men. The sides of the airplane are made of heavy steel which easily wards off anti-air craft shells.

Prince Poniatowski, who came over to purchase airplanes for the French Government, said that things were not so bad as they were depicted in the aviation resources of the Allies. The new German tri-plane, he added, had been in the field two months and the French Government was constructing a machine to cope with it which will be ready shortly. The talk of German supremacy of the air, he said, did not mean very much, as it was one of those conditions that were liable to change frequently.

French Order Praises C. M. Ashton, Jr., for Bravery Under Fire.

PARIS, July 26.—Charles M. Ashton, Jr., of Philadelphia, a Dartmouth student, who is a volunteer driver in the American Field Service and who was wounded while on service on July 15, is cited in orders today for his conduct in proceedings to advance positions under violent bombardment to search for wounded soldiers. It was while engaged in this work that he was seriously wounded.

The citation adds that Ashton had already given proof under similar circumstances of his courage and coolness.

Government Orders $84 Minimum Yearly Increase for Railway Men.

PARIS, July 26.—The Government has given orders that all employes of the State railroads shall receive increases in salaries of at least $84 annually.

The ruling takes effect as from June 1. It was decided upon after the receipt of a report from Georges Desplas, Minister of Public Works, that conditions of railroad workers must be ameliorated immediately by increased pay to meet the high cost of living.

STATE FILLS QUOTA FOR REGULAR ARMY

OFFICIALS ACCEPT 144 MEN

New York Now Has Clean Slate for All Branches of Volunteer Service Except the National Guard.

New York joined the ranks of the States which have filled their quota for the regular army yesterday, and added a few more for good measure, when 144 men were accepted at the New York recruiting stations and sent to Fort Slocum. Tuesday night there were still 268 men needed to fill the State's quota, but on Wednesday 188 men and yesterday 144 men were enlisted in New York City alone, so that even without the enlistments from up-State, which are not reported to the local recruiting headquarters at 280 Broadway, there is no question that the quota has been filled.

Colonel R. D. Walsh, in charge of recruiting in New York, expressed himself as much pleased with the manner in which volunteers had come forward in the last few days, and with the fact that the quota had at least been filled. He also gave out some detailed figures regarding the progress of the local recruiting campaign.

"In the period from April 1 to July 25, inclusive," he said, "12,129 applicants were accepted in the New York City recruiting district, which includes Hudson County, N. J. Of this number 706 were accepted in Hudson County, whose quota is 1,078. The quota for New York, Bronx, Kings, Queens, Nassau, Suffolk, and Richmond Counties was 9,893, and 11,423 men were obtained, 9,187 of whom were accepted in Manhattan and the Bronx, and 2,236 in Brooklyn and the Long Island offices. These counties have therefore obtained 1,530 men more than their quota.

"It is probable, when the up-State reports are known, that it will be shown that the New York State quota was actually filled on Wednesday, but to make matters sure, it was more than filled today. Every one should understand, however, that recruiting will still continue as heretofore, and that all men of draft age are eligible for voluntary enlistment until they have been notified to appear before their local boards for physical examination."

Militia Being Rapidly Filled.

New York now has a clean slate in respect of its quota for all branches of the service which are filled by volunteers, with the exception of its own National Guard division, and its ranks are rapidly being filled and will probably be complete in a few more days. The Navy and Marine Corps quotas from New York were filled months ago, and have now been far exceeded. Colonel C. B. Hatch, U. S. M. C., who visited the local Marine Corps recruiting office at 24 East Twenty-third Street yesterday, said that New York led all the cities of the Eastern Division by enlisting 112 men in the corps from July 1 to 24.

It was announced yesterday that the only remaining vacancies in the Signal Corps, U. S. A., except in the aviation section, were in the telegraphers' and wireless men's ranks. However, a new opportunity was also opened yesterday by the announcement of Captain Richard I. McKenney of the Chief of Staff's office of the Coast Artillery Corps, U. S. A., that he had been authorized to enlist 200 men for the non-commissioned officers' school of the corps at Fortress Monroe, Va.

Men enlisting in this branch will not, in all probability, be sent abroad, but will be trained for positions of responsibility in manning the coast defenses of the United States, taking the places of trained men of the Coast Artillery Corps who have been sent to France or soon will go thither. They will be trained as skilled electricians, gunners, photographers, clerks, &c., and will on graduation be ranked as non-commissioned officers. Captain McKenney's office is on Governors Island.

Scarcity of Cooks Continues.

Not only the army and the navy, but the Coast Defense Reserve, and in fact every branch of the service, continue to find greater difficulty in getting enough cooks, bakers, butchers, and wireless men than men for any other duty. Apparently the demand for trained men along these lines far exceeds the supply.

Major General John F. O'Ryan, commanding the Sixth, or New York, Division of the National Guard, which is soon, it is reported, to become the Twenty-seventh Division of the National Army, has received a letter from the Episcopal Church of the Spartanburg, S. C., where the division is to go in training camp, assuring the New York soldiers of a hearty welcome from Spartanburg, and offering the use of the Parish House to officers and men as a headquarters during their leisure hours.

The headquarters of the British Recruiting Mission at 280 Broadway yesterday gave out some detailed figures on the progress of British recruiting in this country. They show that from June 6 to July 21 they enlisted 3,601 men, of whom 903 went into British units and the remainder into the Canadian army. Of these 1,865 came from New York City, 1,155 of these for the Canadian Army, and San Francisco was second, with 186 men, 136 of them for the Canadian forces.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—New York State lacked only thirty-one men to fill its quota for the army when recruiting closed on Wednesday. During the day 2,370 new recruits were obtained throughout the country. A total of 161,377 men have been enrolled since April 1, leaving the army only about 22,000 short of its full war strength. The daily statement on regular army recruiting issued by Adjt. Gen. McCain follows:

DISLOYAL SOLDIER SENTENCED TO 7 YEARS

Private Otto Ludwig, U. S. A., Spoke Disrespectfully of the President and the Flag.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, July 26. — Seven years at hard labor in the United States disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth is the sentence Private Otto Ludwig, Third Aero Squadron, must serve for making disrespectful remarks about President Wilson and the American flag, and for threatening to desert to the Germans if sent to France.

Ludwig was found guilty by court-martial at Fort Sam Houston recently and the sentence of the court was approved by General Parker today.

IRISH CONVENTION ADJOURNS TILL AUG. 8

Preliminary Procedure Committee Preparing Proposals—Duke Praises Delegates.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, July 26.—The second day's proceedings of the Irish convention have confirmed the good impression of the opening day. A practical and business-like complexion has been given to the assembly, and while nobody underestimates the hardness of the various nuts which will have to be cracked before a sound and satisfactory kernel can be found there is general agreement that the difficulties will be approached in the right spirit.

Henry E. Duke, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in a conversation with THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today, laid emphasis on the practical side of the Irish character, and said that the delegates to the convention were in the main men who had a large experience of affairs. Mr. Duke naturally would make no prediction as to the ultimate results of the convention, but he was evidently impressed by the spirit in which the assembly met.

The population of Dublin again displayed little interest in the gathering of delegates, and, truth to tell, there is nothing spectacular to attract attention. People here appear to think that the absence of any popular demonstration is all to the good.

By The Associated Press.

DUBLIN, July 26.—At today's session of the convention the official report announces a Preliminary Procedure Committee was appointed to prepare proposals, and it was agreed that the convention adjourn until Aug. 8, to enable the Chairman, in conjunction with the secretaries, to prepare and issue to the members in circular form the material necessary to enable the convention to proceed with its task.

The Preliminary Procedure Committee then held its first meeting, continues the official account, and decided to have a draft of the standing orders for the convention at once drawn up. The committee also asked that Sir Francis Hopwood, the convention's secretary, should submit to the members of the committee information in regard to the procedure adopted by the convention that drew up a Constitution for the Union of South Africa.

The committee will meet again next Tuesday.

Irish M. P. Had Accused the Government of a Bomb Plot Against Him.

LONDON, July 26.—Laurence Ginnell, the Irish member who has so often threatened to follow the example of other Sinn Fein members and abstain from attending Parliament, was suspended by the Speaker in the House of Commons this afternoon for refusing to obey a ruling of the chair.

At the conclusion of the question period, Mr. Ginnell accused the Government of having sent secret service men to the House yesterday to discredit the Sinn Feiners, and, amid roars of laughter, he said that if these men had been searched bombs would have been found in their pockets. In reading a number of threatening and abusing letters which he had received, he declared dramatically:

"I believe my life is in danger in this country. If my life is taken my death will be a death for Ireland, and I consider it cheap."

He refused to resume his seat when ordered to do so, and the Speaker instructed the attendants to remove the unruly member. The House adjourned while the attendants hustled Mr. Ginnell from the chamber.

Sinn Feiners Contest Election.

LONDON, July 26.—Another electoral contest between the Nationalist and Sinn Feiners is impending. Ex-Mayor Magennis of Kilkenny has been chosen by the Nationalists to oppose William Gosgrave, recently selected by the Sinn Feiners as their candidate for the Kilkenny seat in Parliament.

TO UNIFY ARMY RESERVE.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—All the units of the army will be kept up to fighting strength, it was announced today, through a single "reserve reservoir," as it is technically called.

Vacancies in the National Guard, the national army, and the regular army will be filled by men drawn from the one reserve organization. Plans for this are being worked out by the Army War College. Along with it will come a scheme for recruiting for all three bodies through a single recruiting service as a part of the general policy of consolidating State troops, the national army, and the regulars.

Details of the plan are not ready for announcement, but it is already considered clear by army officials that a single reserve organization is the only practicable way to handle the problem presented by two arms of the service—the National Guard and the national army, with State affiliations and local pride—and the regular army.

This problem of unification is assuming importance now that recruiting is about to be reduced with the completion of the draft. Drafted men will be used to give the regular army and the National Guard the men needed to bring each to its war strength. State identity will be preserved as carefully as possible. It may often be impracticable to preserve it absolutely. Maine, for example, has one National Guard regiment. If there are vacancies in this regiment they will be filled by men from Maine if the reserve contains enough men from Maine ready for service, but keeping the regiment up to reasonable strength is more important than keeping it strictly a Maine regiment. This general policy will apply to all National Guard and national army units.

BATTLE TO DEATH RAGING ON AISNE

The text of the statement follows:

Army of Crown Prince Rupprecht: The artillery battle between the coast and the Lys continues to rage with undiminished intensity and on several occasions has increased to drumfire. At night the firing engagement slackened but little and near Hellwerden it again rose to very great intensity. English reconnoitering thursts continued, but they met with no success.

In Artois strong artillery fire again is being directed against positions near Lens. By the use of flame throwers our Lubeck storming troops near Monchy-le-Preux captured an important trench sector, which the enemy thrice vainly endeavored to recapture.

Army of the German Crown Prince—After excellent artillery preparation detachments of the Westphalian Regiment stormed during the evening a French position south of Ailles over a width of 1,800 meters to a depth of 400 meters. This morning northwest of Hurtebise Lower Rhenish battalions went forward for a surprise attack and wrested from the enemy dominating portions of a high ridge.

In Champagne Schleswig-Holstein and Brandenburg storming troops carried out a raid. They captured the remainder of the terrain on the Hochberg, which had remained in the hands of the French since the 14th.

On all three battlefields the enemy made futile counterattacks, thus increasing his sanguinary losses. Altogether 1,150 prisoners, including 46 officers, and numerous trench pieces have been brought in.

The supplementary official statement issued this evening says:

Quiet, on British Front.

LONDON, July 26.—The official report from British Headquarters in France tonight reads:

Owing to a thick mist, there was little activity in the air yesterday. One German machine was brought down in an air fight. One of ours is missing.

There is nothing further of special interest to report.

The early statement said:

We made a successful raid last night southeast of Armentieres. There is nothing else of special interest.

GUNFIRE GREATER IN FLANDERS

Ruins of Nieuport Subjected to an All-Night Bombardment.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, July 26.—The enemy's gunfire is increasing in violence at more than one part of the British front. Last night the town of Nieuport, which was in ruins as long ago as October, 1914, was bombarded from 10 o'clock until 5 this morning with every calibre up to 5.9, the British artillery replying with equal violence so that for miles around the air is vibrating day and night with the heavy shock of this great gunning, and in quiet harvest fields remote from all the scenes of war peasants lift their heads to listen to this thunder in the blue sky and know that away there the sledge-hammers of death are at work again.

Yesterday there was a storm lasting until midday, but afterward hot sunshine, so that flights of airplanes went across the enemy's lines again and had many fights.

The flame of war broke out also to the east of Monchy, where 400 Germans advanced upon the line of British trenches already smashed down by artillery concentration and attacked with flammerwerfer, which spread a line of scarlet fire before them. Some posts were driven in and there are a few men missing. It is clear the enemy is preparing for very desperate fighting and has massed a great number of men and guns against the British lines.

Belgians Repulse an Attack.

HAVRE, July 26, (via Paris.)—The Belgian War Office issued the following statement today:

A surprise attack attempted by the Germans during the night against our trenches north of Dixmude failed completely, the enemy being repulsed by grenades. The usual artillery action took place.

VIENNA, July 26, (via London.)—The official communication issued today dealing with the fighting in Galicia says it was the army of General von Koevess which captured the Baba and Ludowa heights, and that the Budapest infantry regiment named after Maria Theresa, once Queen of Hungary and Bohemia, especially distinguished itself in overcoming the Russian resistance at the Tartar Pass.

WHOLE DIVISION SHOT FOR ITS TREACHERY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, July 23, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—General Korniloff, Commander in Chief of the southwestern front, although only three or four days in occupation of this responsible position, lost no time in dealing with the defaulting soldiery of the Eleventh Army. Unable to get timely authorization from Petrograd to ignore all recent regulations, including the famous "rights of soldiers" document, Korniloff did the best possible with the means at hand.

The active clause of the latter, the only one of any use to Korniloff, is that about the uttermost extremities of severity being employed, and upon this Korniloff acted. I am not at liberty to mention the number of the division concerned, but one whole division of this Eleventh Army of politicanting wearers of the uniform has been blown to pieces by its own artillery, eager to avenge upon the traitorous rascals the insults which all the loyal troops, and the artillery first and foremost, have been silently enduring for four months past.

It is evident that Korniloff has taken a firm hold, and his drastic measures may prevent the Petrograd cancer from spreading to the neighborhood of the armies.

About the advance on the western front at Baranovichi, Smorgon, and generally in the direction of Vilna, the less said the better for the present. The first announcement is that in one place the German lines were penetrated to a depth of two miles, but that the losses in officers was very considerable. The bulletin says they fell in masses, which is a pretty clear indication of what happened on this front, namely, the same as on the southwestern front, that is to say, whole regiments were made up of officers only, gladly serving as privates in the hope of giving the lead to the armies.

YIELD TO ARMY CHIEFS ON DEATH PENALTY

Korniloff Threatened to Resign Unless This Punishment by Courts-Martial Were Restored.

PETROGRAD, July 26.—Yielding to the demands of the Commander in Chief and the various commanders at the front, the Provisional Government today unanimously agreed to restore capital punishment and to establish on all fronts courts-martial composed of three officers and three soldiers. General Korniloff telegraphed from Galicia threatening to resign if this were not done. "It is the only means of saving my army," he said.

It was decided also to convoke in Moscow soon a conference of the principal representatives of the Russian social organizations and to place before it the facts in the country as they actually are.

In an order modifying the decree relating to press restrictions the Government authorizes the Minister of the Interior to suspend the publication of periodicals that incite to insubordination or disobedience to orders given by the military authorities, or the non-execution of military duties, as well as to acts of violence and civil war. Editors responsible for the publication of articles of this character will be brought to trial.

The inquiry into the recent disorders here is being continued energetically under the supervision of the Public Prosecutor. The authorities are taking measures to discover and bring to justice all organizers of and participants in the revolt.

Another proclamation has been issued on behalf of the Executives of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates and the Peasants' Congress. It is signed by N. C. Tcheidse, President of the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates and Socialist member of the Duma, and is addressed to all committees of the army and the fleet, and declares that the revolution is being endangered.

"Lack of discipline and open treachery at the front," says the proclamation, "are facilitating Field Marshal von Hindenburg's new offensive. The serious defeats inflicted on our army are opening the way to the enemy for increasing the general panic and preparing the soil in which the poisonous seeds of counter-revolution may come into full bloom. Already an attack is being organized by the strong bourgeoisie; already the jackals and hyenas of the old régime are howling."

Then, outlining the measures adopted and the powers conferred upon the Government to deal with the situation, the proclamation continues:

"We appeal to you, our representatives, with a passionate appeal. * * * Support the revolutionary authority; try to secure the full submission of working men, soldiers and peasants to all the decisions of democracy's majority. Inspire them; awaken enthusiasm in them. Exert your entire will, your entire energy. Rally round our All-Russian centres and we will show the country and the world that the nation which created the greatest revolution in the world cannot and shall not perish."

In an interview today Premier Kerensky said the fundamental problem of the Provisional Government lay in providing for immedate safety of the country and the revolution, whatever the cost might be. The Government was thoroughly conscious of the duty before it, he said, and was determined to make a resolute stand against anything which threatened the ruin of the State.

The Premier stated that re-establishment of the death penalty at the front was necessary in view of the fact that the Government was faced with the alternative of sacrificing the army to a body of traitors and cowards or having recourse to the only possible means of inspiring terror.

The Provisional Government, in complete agreement with the entire army, took the burden of heavy reponsibility solely in order to save the lives of heroes who were perishing in the execution of their duty for the sake of their country, and to remove the reproach threatening the good name of Russia.

A telegram from Helsingfors says that the Russian warships Slava, Republika, and Petropavlosk, which were involved in the recent disaffection of men in the Baltic fleet, have been recalled to favor in consequence of Premier Kerensky's order concerning the dissolution of the Central Committee of the Baltic fleet. The committee's flag on the yacht Polar Star, which formerly belonged to Emperor Nicholas, has been lowered.

LONDON, July 26.—The new Russian Minister of Justice, M. Efremoff, has publicly declared that he is resolutely opposed to the Socialist Minister of Agriculture's proposal that all land transactions be prohibited immediately, says a Reuter dispatch from Petrograd. The Minister of Justice contends that the whole land question is one for the constituent assembly.

BRITISH COVERED RETREAT.

Korniloff Thanks Armored Car Crews and Decorates Them.

LONDON, July 26.—Special dispatches from Petrograd ascribe to British armored cars a gallant part in covering the Russian retreat in Galicia. The infantry deserted them, hence their stand was unavailing, but the German advance was held up some time.

The Commander in Chief personally congratulated the British commander, Locker Lampson, and presented twenty-six crosses of St. George to his men. The British casualties were only five wounded, and the cars later co-operated with the Russian cavalry in front of Tarnopol.

EMBASSY HERE HOPEFUL.

Thinks Press Reports of Situation in Russia Are Exaggerated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—At the Russian Embassy today it was stated that the pessimistic reports regarding the Russian situation cabled from abroad were believed by members of the embassy to be exaggerated. It was believed that when the real situation in Russia became known it would develop that there was ground for much greater optimism than the press dispatches had indicated and the facts would be more encouraging.

The embassy's reports did not deal with the military situation today, but were reassuring regarding the political situation. They stated that the Provisional Government had the political situation well in hand, was carrying out measures for the prevention of future disorders, and that steps were being taken to improve conditions in the army.

SAW "PACIFISTS" BOUGHT.

Mrs. Lodyguine Says German Agents Scattered Money in Petrograd.

According to Mrs. Alexander Lodyguine, wife of a Russian civil engineer, who returned yesterday to America on a Danish liner after spending ten years in Petrograd, German agents disguised as Socialists and anarchists have been openly engaged in spreading revolt against the Provisional Government.

"I have seen," Mrs. Lodyguine said, "German agents circulating money among the crowds in the streets and giving ten-ruble notes to all those who shouted loudly for peace. Their propaganda is aided by the shortage of foodstuffs which is owing to the existing disorder in the country.

"We are confident, however, that Premier Kerensky will restore order in Russia. He is a wonderful man and the best people in the country are ready to follow and obey his orders."

Mrs. Lodyguine, who was born in New York, was accompanied by her two daughters, Marguerite, 16, and Vera, 14 years, whom she is bringing here to be educated. The girls were members of the Girl Scouts of Petrograd, numbering about 100, and during the exciting days of the revolution they were employed in carrying messages between the various foreign embassies on the Nevsky Prospect.

"One night," said Miss Marguerite, "we stood guard with carbines and sword bayonets at one of the Government buildings while the rioting was going on so that the tired guards could get a little sleep."

ANTI-JEWISH CAMPAIGN.

Russian Extremists and Reactionaries Join in Propaganda.

A Petrograd cable to the New York Warheit says that anti-Semitic propaganda is being actively carried on in Russia by both the Bolsheviks, or extreme radicals, and by the reactionary groups which are striving for a counter-revolution. The dispatch reads in part:

"The Jews in Russia will have much to suffer from the counter-revolution of the Bolsheviks and the Maxmalists. Unfortunately many Jews are themselves Bolsheviks, or leaders of the Bolhevikis. The general cry at this moment is that the Jews, who claim to be internationalists, are working for peace.

"The reactionaries of all groups have seized on this weapon and are using it to conduct a general anti-Semitic agitation over the whole country. They are spreading everywhere the false and treacherous charges that the Jews are German agents and that they have brought about the uprising of the Bolsheviks. The reactionaries, who strongly oppose the Bolsheviks, but who agree with them in their anti-Semitic propaganda, are working together in this matter."

RUSSIAN WOMEN FOR NAVY.

Offer to Train for Battleships Accepted by Kerensky.

LONDON, Friday, July 27.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Petrograd says that Russian women have offered to train themselves as crews for battleships and that Minister of Marine Kerensky has accepted their offer.

GREETS STEVENS MISSION.

Russian Association of Railroad Engineers Holds Reception.

PETROGRAD, July 26.—The American Railroad Commission to Russia, headed by John S. Stevens, was received today by the Association of Engineers of Railroads and Waterways. David R. Francis, the American Ambassador, and representatives of industrial and other organizations were present at the reception.

After speeches had been made by members of the Russian engineering organization, welcoming the commission, the Americans, in addresses, expressed their ardent desire to assist Russia in the solving of her problems. Ambassador Francis in his speech alluded to the unity of Russia and America in the struggle against Germany.

The Chairman of the meeting, speaking for the Russians present, requested Ambassador Francis to send President Wilson a cable message expressing Russia's gratitude for American co-operation.

GERMAN PRISONERS DESPAIR OF VICTORY

DON'T FEAR OUR ARMIES

Captives in England Believe Peace Will Come Before They Are Put in the Field.

(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)

LONDON, July 12.—Germany's dream of world conquest has been shattered, and the belief among all classes there now is that the war must end through diplomacy rather than by a brilliant German victory, according to German prisoners in England. But the prisoners generally appear to attach little importance to America's participation in the war.

A representative of The Associated Press, who has just returned here after a visit to the large internment camp at Dorchester, where approximately 1,900 German prisoners are quartered, is enabled to present many interesting sidelights on the German point of view as represented by men of all types who have fought with the German forces on land and sea and in the air. These may be summarized as follows:

The economic situation in Germany is not so bad as it has been represented, either by the belligerent or neutral press.

Contrary to reports, there is no visible shortage of materials actually needed for the prosecution of the war.

America's entry into the war will prolong rather than shorten it.

The United States, being essentially a commercial nation, she cannot make her great man power felt soon enough to change the course of events.

The submarines are doing all that was expected of them.

There is a surprising lack of concern manifested by the prisoners because of the United States being arrayed against their country. The correspondent was allowed to mingle with them freely, at times without any of the British officials in charge of the camp being present. A young German airman who was brought down recently off Dover, and who exhibited an Iron Cross which he said he had won for many daring feats over the Anglo-French lines, seemed to express the view of the more intelligent class of prisoners by asserting there had been "so many declarations of war" against Germany when the United States came in that it did not matter. Asked whether it would surprise the German people if the United States should actually place 1,000,000 men in France within a year, the airman smiled as one amused and replied: "I should like to see them there first."

Think the Kaiser's Throne Safe.

A tall, distinguished-looking fellow who has been a prisoner of war since the battle of the Marne, and who said he was formerly a lawyer in Bavaria, expressed the belief that the war would undoubtedly result in giving the German people a more democratic form of government. He doubted, however, whether any attempt to remove the Emperor would succeed. Germany, he said, was so accustomed to an imperial head that he did not think it would be advisable for her to follow Russia's example. Others, including a former merchant, a Government official from West Africa, and a young man who said he had been a professor of English in a German university laughed heartily when the thought was suggested to them.

Three Prussian youths, who were taken prisoners by the British in the recent Messines "push," were believed to have represented the attitude of the peasant classes when they asserted that they did not even know the United States had entered the war. They were each 20 years of age and had been called to the colors a year ago much against their will, they said. They had received nine months' training prior to being sent to the front.

The remarkable training of the Germans is shown in the discipline maintained at the Dorchester camp. Although more than 20,000 prisoners have been interned there since the war started, only two have attempted to escape. Almost without exception the Germans say they are contented with their surroundings and are well treated.

Prisoners Are Well Fed.

The prisoners do their own washing and cooking. Their rations consist of thirteen ounces of bread daily, six ounces of meat five days a week, three-quarters of an ounce of coffee daily, one ounce of sugar daily, two ounces of turnips daily, two ounces of beans or peas daily, two ounces of oatmeal daily, one ounce of jam daily, two ounces of cheese daily, ten ounces of fish two days a week, four ounces of rice daily and meal, pepper and salt. There is a slight reduction of bread, cheese, and meal in the ration of those who do no work.

Except for their confinement, the German war prisoners are not much differently situated than any ordinary party of campers. Perhaps the one thing which impresses an American most is the spirit of sympathy which seems to exist between the British officials and their German charges and is shown not so much in their military salutations as by the care the one has taken not to contribute any more than is necessary to the discomfort of the other, while the prisoner himself smilingly accepts his lot as one infinitely better than that of his former comrades in arms.

NO ASSAULT ON KAISER.

Bremen Newspaper Is Authorized to Deny Current Rumors.

AMSTERDAM, July 26.—The Weser Zeitung of Bremen prints prominently "stories, with more or less elaborate particulars, that have gained currency of an attempt made recently on the life of Emperor William." The "details" include one report that the Emperor's jaw was smashed. At the conclusion of the article the newspaper says:

"The general command at Altona in reply to our inquiry authorizes us to make the following announcement:

"'As the result of inquiries made in proper quarters it may be stated that the rumor of an attempt on the Kaiser is wholly untrue.'"

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, July 26.—Die Post of Berlin has an article on Mexico as "the Land of the Future," otherwise the land Germany hopes to exploit in future. This is only one more sign of Germany's growing anxiety about procuring raw materials after the war.

The article points out how tremendously rich Mexico is in raw materials of all kinds, adding that of the oversea countries it is perhaps the only one that will not be influenced by the Entente's economic policies, and so will be able to enter into immediate negotiations with the Central Powers.

"Mexican raw materials," continues Die Post, "have therefore a special interest for German merchants and industrialists. The country is extremely rich and its prosperity could be increased a hundredfold if it were more thickly populated."

The paper continues by pointing out how rich Mexico is in water power, coal, petroleum, and iron ore, that labor is cheap, and the climate favorable at all seasons, but nevertheless, in spite of cheap raw materials, Mexico is very backward.

"There is actually no chemical factory in Mexico," continues Die Post, "but numerous industrial enterprises which are connected with the chemical industry are in German hands, such as enterprises in oil, starch, soap, scents, and bleaching factories."

Die Post proceeds to say that the Mexican rubber output is increasing in importance, and already many important plantations are in German hands, as at Saltillo. Cattle breeding and the leather industry are also of importance, but unexploited. The paper concludes with the statement that Mexico is one of the richest countries in natural water power and electrical energy.

ASSAILS EX-KING MANUEL.

London Chronicle Says He Should Be Fighting at Front.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, July 27.—The Daily Chronicle this morning complains editorially that the London newspapers continue to describe ex-King Manuel as "King Manuel." It says:

"It is not very complimentary to our gallant republican ally Portugal to describe its ex-King as if here were still a ruling Sovereign."

After declaring that the deposed King "ran away from his throne and his country" The Chronicle adds:

"Ex-King Manuel would prove himself more of a man and patriot if he were to take some part in the war, fighting, for instance, with the Belgian Army, (he is fit and 28.) He was wounded last year—playing tennis at Eastbourne."

18-Year-Old Girl Cited for Bravery on the Italian Front.

COPENHAGEN, June 25, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Victoria Sanz of Meran, an 18-year-old Tyrolean girl who has been fighting in the trenches on the Italian front for the last two years, was seriously wounded in a battle a few days ago, says a dispatch to a Berlin newspaper. She was operated on and later pronounced out of danger, although it was said that she would be incapacitated for further service.

The girl is the holder of a bronze medal for bravery and is on the list for further decoration.

SHIPS IN SIAM DAMAGED.

Teuton Vessels Seized After War Declaration Are Out of Order.

BANGKOK, July 26.—The machinery of the Austro-German steamers which were seized after Siam had declared war against the Central Powers on July 22, was found to be damaged. All male subjects of enemy countries have been interned and all enemy business will be wound up.

Nine steamers, aggregating 19,000 tons, were seized by the Siamese Government with its entrance into the war. They were owned chiefly by the North German Lloyd Company.

Stay Halts Operation of Writ Against Postal Authorities.

The operation of the injunction granted on Tuesday by Judge Learned Hand of the Federal District Court, restraining the Post Office authorities from further refusing to send through the mails the August issue of The Masses, a Socialist magazine, was stopped yesterday by a stay of proceedings granted by Judge Hough of the United States Circuit Court.

Early yesterday morning Judge Hand filed the injunction order. Then United States District Attorney Caffey, through his assistant, Earl B. Barnes, obtained from Judge Manton the right to appeal from Judge Hand's decision. For the purpose of stopping the mailing of the distribution of the magazine through the mails pending the time it would take to prepare papers in the appeal, Judge Hough was communicated with at his country home in Hanover, N. H. He consented to grant the stay on the claim of errors having been made. He will hear argument on the stay at Windsor, Vt., on Aug. 2.

I tis not likely that the Circuit Court of Appeals will hear the case before October when the number of the magazine, now being held, will be several numbers behind orders to be issued. The Government officials argued that if the magazine was circulated any harm it might do would have been accomplished, and that further legal proceedings would be useless. The only way the alleged harm could be avoided, therefore, was to keep the magazine out of the mails until a final decision of the courts was obtained.

BAR ENEMY ALIENS FROM EXCURSIONS

SPY BARRIER MORE RIGID

Steamboat Companies Notified by United States Marshal That Suspected Persons Will Be Arrested.

The Department of Justice in Washington called Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy on the telephone yesterday afternoon and instructed him to put into effect a new war regulation which will in the future forbid any alien enemy to travel by boat to Coney Island, the Rockaways, Glen Island, or any of the other seaside or Sound resorts. Marshal McCarthy announced that official notice would be given today to the owners of all excursion craft plying New York waters.

The reason for the issuance of the order was that under the regulations as they existed it was possible for any enemy of the United States to travel at will up and down either of the rivers and anywhere in the harbor without running the chance of being interfered with by Federal, State, or city authorities.

For instance, if a number of American or allied military transports happened to be in New York harbor and a German spy desired to get the names of those ships all that he had to do was to buy an excursion boat ticket to Coney Island and go on board the boat at 129th Street and the North River. On the way to Coney Island that boat passes every transatlantic pier as well as all the Government piers on both sides of the river. By taking the same trip he could keep track of practically every improvement, in the way of armament or otherwise, at all of the forts guarding the Atlantic entrance to New York harbor. On the other hand if the German agent wanted to find out what was going on in the East River all he had to do was to take a trip to Glen Island or any other Sound resort.

On the day that the Pershing expedition set sail for France it was possible for German spies to get the name of all the transports, the approximate number of troops on board of each, and the hour of sailing of every ship, by traveling to and from Coney Island, the Rockaways, or the Highlands. Secret Service agents have stated that this may have been one of the plans followed by the German spies to get the news of the sailing of the first American overseas force.

Marshal McCarthy stated last night that hereafter any German subject found on board any excursion or other pleasure craft in the waters of New York harbor will be immediately taken into custody, and will be liable to internment. The new orders from Washington have been transmitted to the police as well as the agents of the Federal Secret Service agencies.

"It is the duty of all good citizens," said Marshal McCarthy last night, "to notify the office of the United States Marshal of any violation of this and the other regulations which forbid enemies to enter the waterfront zones, or to go aboard any craft."

FRENCH RESCUER HONORED.

PARIS, July 26.—The newest member of the Legion of Honor is Private Charles Gaulet, who, despite the amputation of his leg, risked his life to save a child who was drowning when the steamer La Madjerda was torpedoed. Gaulet plunged into the water, rescued the child, and, by his coolness and courage, set an example for others that materially aided the rescue work.

The French passenger steamer La Madjerda was sunk by a submarine while on a voyage from Oran, Algeria, to Marseilles. The survivors were picked up and taken to various ports. La Madjerda was a vessel of 1,918 tons gross.

AMERICAN AIRMAN HURT.

Bennett Moulter, Who Fought in Mexico, Is Injured in France.

PARIS, July 26.—Bennett Moulter, an American aviator in the French service, has been injured, but not dangerously, on the Belgian front by being pitched out of his machine on landing, after a night flight over the German lines.

Moulter fought for and against General Villa in Mexico.

Italian Airship Raids St. Lucia.

ROME, July 26.—Today's War Office statement regarding military operations on the Austro-Italian front reads: "On the whole front the artillery and patrol activity was normal. During the night an isolated attack by the army southwest of Castagnevizza was broken up by our fire. One of our airships paid a surprise visit, under adverse atmospheric conditions, to St. Lucia-Tolmino, dropping a ton of high explosives on the railway works and doing considerable damage."

Whites Invade Negro Settlement After One of Their Number Is Slain—A Policeman Shot.

Special to The New York Times.

CHESTER, Penn., July 26.—Race rioting broke out anew here tonight after a day of comparative quiet, and before a posse, established earlier in the day by Mayor McDowell, could restore order two whites and a negro had been killed and several persons wounded. The rioting reached its climax early in the evening, when a mob of 500 whites invaded the districts inhabited by the negroes. They brushed past the city police and loudly proclaimed their intention of avenging the white men who had been injured last night.

Joseph McCann, 28 years old, was the white man killed. He was in a mob that gave chase to a negro whom they suspected of having been implicated in last night's riot. At Third and Lloyd Streets the negro turned, drew a revolver, and fired three times. McCann dropped in his tracks and died two minutes later.

It was in revenge for this killing that the same mob, augmented by new arrivals until it contained more than 2,000 men, pulled two negroes from a street car and shot one of them to death. The other escaped amid a fusillade of bullets.

McCann's murderer was chased to a house at 1,017 West Third Street, but made his way to a house at Front and Lloyd Streets, where he attempted to intrench himself. The mob set fire to the building. As the flames began to gain headway the Mayor's posse arrived and ten policemen who broke through the crowd made their way to the third floor, where they found the negro.

When they reached the street the crowd began to push forward, but the posse, with revolvers pointed at the mob, took the negro to a patrol wagon amid a shower of bricks and other missiles. The prisoner was taken to the City Hall and the mob followed.

Turning from the station house, the rioters pulled poles from two trolley cars in Third Street, between Howell and Broomwall Streets. As the third car came up, they saw two negroes mingling with the white passengers. Bricks and stones were thrown at the car, slightly injuring several of the passengers.

The negroes, frightened by the mob, who paid little attention to two members of the State Constabulary, dashed into the street. One of them escaped, but the other was shot down as he was running along Third Street. He got a bullet in his head, and died instantly.

The third fatality occurred shortly before midnight, when Policeman James Jarrett was shot and instantly killed by a bullet fired by a negro. The policeman was trying to quell an outbreak along the "black belt" when he was killed. Mayor McDowell ordered all citizens to get off the streets of Chester by midnight.

MEXICAN OIL PRODUCTION.

Carranza's News Bureau Says Lack of Ships Hampers It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—A statement in explanation of the Mexican oil situation from the Mexican point of view was issued tonight by the Mexican News Bureau, which is the agency through which the Carranza Government makes its announcements in this country.

"There is a widespread misunderstanding," says the statement, "regarding the production and use of Mexican petroleum, as evidenced by many publications upon the subject. Some very interesting light is thrown upon the matter by the published hearings before the Senate Committee on Public Lands which were recently held and during which the oil and coal questions were discussed at length.

"From statements made before the committee it appears that it is a surprising fact to both the English and the American navies the fuel specifications now in force forbid the use of Mexican oil. They distinctly provide that 'Mexican oil will not be accepted.' This prohibition was first made by the English Navy and was followed by that of the United States. The manner in which Mexican petroleum goes into use in the British Navy is by having it shipped to the United States, where it goes into a common pool, after which it is shipped abroad and supplied to the navy as the 'purely American product.'

"The fact was brought out that the potential production of the Mexican oil fields was in round numbers 1,000,000 barrels daily, but that because of lack of transportation facilities the actual production was much less—less than 1,000,000 barrels per week. Thus, the Huasteca Petroleum Company, with a potential capacity of 300,000 barrels daily—that is, with wells already driven and able to produce that amount, but shut down—is only producing 50,000 barrels, that being the amount that can be exported.

"We are producing all we can move," said the manager of the company. This applies to other companies as well. There is no difficulty in getting the oil to the coast, as the wells are located at no great distance from shipping points, and all are provided with pipe lines, there being something like 500 miles of such lines in the comparatively limited area in which are included the greater number of the producing wells of the republic. Ocean transportation is the difficulty, and this is being met by the construction of oil-carrying steamers as rapidly as possible."

ROOSEVELT SNUBS MAYOR THOMPSON

BARS HIS SPEAKING, TOO

Keeps Him from Figuring at Big Open-Air Meeting—Mayor Addresses the Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Friday, July 27.—The Herald prints the following dispatch from its correspondent in Pittsburgh, under date of July 26:

William Hale Thompson, Burgomaster of the "sixth largest German city in the world," had a rough time in Pittsburgh today.

The Mayor of Chicago came here to attend the world convention of the Loyal Order of the Moose, bringing with him a delegation of children from the Moose Home at Mooseheart.

Theodore Roosevelt also was a guest, and the presence of the ex-President was the thorn in the chaplet that Big Bill expected to place on his own brow.

In the first place, the Burgomaster wanted to eat breakfast with the Colonel at the William Penn Hotel. The Colonel said no—and didn't stop at that. He served notice on the convention managers that if Thompson was allowed to talk at the big open-air meeting in front of the Allegheny Court House they would have to get along without him. The Colonel spoke. Big Bill didn't.

The declination to break bread with him did not, apparently, have any effect on the Burgomaster. He made a call at Mr. Roosevelt's hotel, but found T. R. "out." He declared he would make another effort to see Teddy, but didn't succeed, much to the deep regret of a number of persons who were seeking "listening posts" in the hall, just under the opened transom of the Colonel's apartments.

The officers of the convention had a hard time explaining Thompson's presence to the delegates. The explanation given was that the invitation to him was extended three months ago, before Big Bill's pro-German tendencies became known.

The Burgomaster attended the convention. He may not know it, but a "committee of safety" was on the job, prepared to stop him instantaneously if he should give utterance to any expression that might be regarded as unpatriotic. He didn't offend. He simply read a semi-historical essay, bringing in George III., John Hancock, and other celebrities.

Chicago's Mayor made several references to the Deity and quoted at odd times from the Scriptures during his address. He praised the work of the Loyal Order of Moose, and around the tenets of humanity and brotherly love of the Moose he constructed his argument.

"Having secured religious liberty," he said, "this great and growing people next turned their thoughts to political liberty, or the right of self-government. It is not necessary to recite here in detail the early history of our country, which culminated in the American Declaration of Independence. That historic document was written around the central idea that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

"In connection with the inane claptrap being indulged in lately in certain quarters about how we are to revolutionize the governments of the Old World, it is well to remember this fundamental principle upon which our nation was built. We should not be justified, no matter how benevolent were our intentions, to attempt to impose our will on other peoples in the matter of their forms of government.

"Who can forget the patriotism of John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence, who, with a price on his head, said: 'I will sign so George III. can read my name without his spectacles.' Blood and treasure were poured out freely to give life to our declaration, and the story of the grim, cruel Winter at Valley Forge is now a part of the immortal glory which shines above the name of Washington. Those were real patriots, if by patriot is meant a person devoted singly to the welfare of his own country. The issue was clearly defined. It did not require reams and reams of paper to set forth the object of that war."

TRAIN FOR NEW WAR, ROOSEVELT DEMANDS

Hopes America Will Never Again Show "Miracle of Inefficiency" for Action.

PITTSBURGH, July 26.—A reception said to be greater than any before accorded to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in Pittsburgh was given to him when he arrived here today to deliver an address at the biennial international convention of the Loyal Order of Moose. Crowds which lined the downtown streets cheered loudly as Colonel Roosevelt was escorted by a reception committee of city and Moose officials from the station to his hotel, and later to a flag raising at the quarters of a division of Pennsylvania National Guard.

The ex-President was the guest at noon at a luncheon given by the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, but made no address there. He addressed an open-air session of the Moose convention at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, speaking on "Americanism." Colonel Roosevelt is an honorary member of the Moose.

In his speech Colonel Roosevelt advocated preparation for the next national emergency by introducing the principle of obligatory, universal military training for young men in time of peace and universal service in time of war. As compared to the other great nations of the world, he said, Americans in this war had exhibited a miracle of inefficiency. He said the United States Government announced that the measures of preparedness now in progress were temporary and would be stopped as soon as the emergency was over. Colonel Roosevelt characterized this as a "criminal refusal to provide for the future."

He summed up what America had accomplished since the declaration of a state of war with Germany by saying that the United States did not now have a single airplane fit to send across the German lines, and that months must pass before one could be manufactured; that America had no heavy artillery to put in the battleline, and that Major Gen. Pershing and his soldiers would have to trust to French and English guns. American submarine chasers operating with the British fleet constituted, he said, only a tiny fraction of the total force. It would be a year after the declaration of war, he predicted, before America would have a fair number of big cargo ships.

"We have not enough rifles for our men," said Colonel Roosevelt. "We are painfully short in equipment. We have not yet begun to assemble the draft men. The first elementary officers' training camps have not been finished, and the National Guard has only just begun to mobilize. We have put a fragment of our fine little regular army into France, and, as it is composed almost exclusively of infantry without artillery, it would be helpless against any well equipped enemy were it not aided by our allies.

"This is the sum total of the activities of a nation of 100,000,000 people, and in possession of incalculable wealth and boundless resources, during the six months following its entry (after two and one-half years' warning) into the greatest war in history. The simple truth is that, relatively to the other great nations of the world, we have in this war exhibited a miracle of inefficiency; and we shall always be inefficient during the first vital months of any war until we learn to prepare in advance.

"It is this utter unpreparedness which should convey the real lesson to us of this war. And remember that as yet we, as a people, acting through our governmental authorities, have not taken one step to avert disaster in the future by introducing a permanent policy of preparedness. The measures we have now acting are temporary makeshifts, announced to be such. We have been caught utterly unprepared in a terrible emergency, because we did nothing until the emergency actually arose, and now our Government announces that what we are doing is purely temporary; that we shall stop doing it as soon as the emergency is over, and will then remain equally unprepared for the next emergency.

"It is this blind refusal—from the nation's standpoint I can only call it the criminal refusal—to provide for the future that forces every honest and far-sighted lover of America to speak. We cannot afford to count for our safety on anything but our own armed strength. The only way to make our strength effective is to make it ready in advance; and the only way really to make ready in advance is to introduce the principle of obligatory universal military training in time of peace for our young men, and universal service in time of war for every man and woman in the country, in whatever position that man or woman can do most effective work. This is the only democratic system."

$35,000 FOR NEW UNIFORMS.

Gov. Edge Orders Immediate Expenditure for Militia.

In order to facilitate the equipping of the new National Guard units which are being recruited in New Jersey, Governor Edge of that State yesterday ordered through the State House Commission the immediate expenditure of $35,000 for new uniforms. The Governor indicated that he would ask the War Department later to reimburse the State. Last Fall, when several regiments of militia were called out for police duty, the Governor took similar action in directing the expenditure of $40,000, which was used in purchasing shoes for the soldiers.

Governor Edge will join Governor Townsend of Delaware in asking the War Department to assign Major Claude Fries, now in Manila, as commander of the brigade which is to be composed of the Second and Third Regiments, New Jersey, and the First Regiment, Delaware.

4,000,000 TONS SUNK SINCE FIRST OF YEAR

URGES FULLER PUBLICITY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, July 27.—The shortage of shipping is far more serious than the public realizes, said Lord Beresford in the House of Lords yesterday.

"From August, 1914, to January, 1917," he said, "British, allied, and neutral losses were 4,000,000 tons. From January, 1917, 4,000,000 tons more have been lost. This rate of loss is equivalent to 8,000,000 tons a year.

"At the beginning of the war there were in the world 49,000,000 tons of shipping, of which the British and allied nations had 30,000,000 tons. As that has been reduced by 8,000,000 tons, there are not more than 22,000,000 or 23,000,000 tons."

Against this it has to be considered what the Americans could put into the water and the number of German ships which have been seized. He estimated that at 2,000,000 tons.

In the first years of the war shipbuilding went down terrifically, and the Allies had "nowhere near begun to make up the deficit." He did not think the Allies could make up more than 4,000,000 tons a year, and he thought the position was "very dangerous."

Once again he appealed to the Government to alter the returns of shipping sunk by submarines. In their present form they were most misleading. Tonnage was the whole question. He did not believe that starvation was possible, but he believed that by March and April there would be a very great shortage of tonnage, and that would be the difficulty the Allies should have to face.

NOT TO SEPARATE MILITIA.

New York's Unattached Regiments to Stay with State Division.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The three New York unattached regiments, the Tenth, the Fourteenth, and the Forty-seventh, are not to be separated from the New York National Guard division, but will be ordered to Spartanburg, S. C., with the complete division of State troops. Brig. Gen. Mann of the Militia Division of the Army General Staff has withdrawn his recommendation that the three additional New York regiments be assigned to a division composed partly of National Guard organizations of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Mississippi, which are to be trained at Camp Beauregard, Alexandria, La., and has recommended that these regiments be formed into a separate brigade at Spartanburg.

While the General Staff has adopted as a policy the formation of field artillery commands out of cavalry troops of the National Guard, it was said at the War Department today that no decision had been reached as to whether Squadron A and other New York cavalry contingents should be reorganized as field artillery.

Protests came both from the South and New York over the proposal to place the Tenth, Fourteenth, and Forty-seventh New York regiments in a division composed of troops from the far South. The Southern protest came from Senator Vardaman and other members of the Mississippi delegation in Congress, and was based on the erroneous belief that one of the New York regiments was composed of negroes. There was objection to separating the three regiments from the New York division and this appealed to General Mann.

Dr. Mabon's Estate $39,335.

Dr. William Mabon, Superintendent of the Manhattan State Hospital and well-known alienist, who died on Feb. 9 last, left an estate of $39,335, which went in equal shares to his wife and daughters, Rosa V. and Margaret V. V. Mabon. He had insurance amounting to $17,290, and forty-eight shares of stock in the Mabon Land Improvement Company, worth $16,800. The corporation was formed as a holding company for real estate owned by Dr. Mabon's father, the Rev. Dr. William V. V. Mabon.

GERMANS ARE BUILDING NEW MERCHANT SHIPS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 26, (via Copenhagen.)—In his annual review for the fiscal year 1916-17 Director General Heineken gives interesting data concerning the activity of the North German Lloyd during the war. Some of its ships are being used as auxiliary war vessels and others are employed in the coasting trade, carrying iron ore from Sweden. One of the latter struck a mine and was destroyed.

The insurance seldom covers the value which ships possess nowadays. Large insurance premiums are being paid for the transfer of ships from neutral ports to home waters, in some cases the object of insurance reaching 10,000,000 marks, for which the rate was 6 per cent., 2 per cent. being repaid on safe arrival at a home port. Emancipating itself from the London insurance market, the North German Lloyd maintains its own insurance company with the aid of large Bremen banking firms.

In agreement with the chief command in the east and in company with the Hamburg-American Line, the North German Lloyd has opened emigration bureaus at Kovno and Warsaw recently to facilitate emigration from occupied districts for persons wishing to go to America. These persons are being transported to Holland, where they take Dutch steamers to the United States. Of late, many seem to prefer South America, for which continent they leave from Amsterdam. A similar bureau has been established at Myslowicz to facilitate emigration from districts occupied by Austrian troops.

The receipts of these bureaus cover only the maintenance and serve to give employment to thousands of otherwise unemployed servitors of the two steamship companies. For this reason the North German Lloyd is also undertaking the catering for about twenty large camps for war prisoners.

The company has built and is building many new ships, some at pre-war prices, others much dearer. Two new mammoth steamers have a capacity of 35,000 tons each. The new passenger steamers Munich and Zeppelin are of 17,000 and 18,000 tons, respectively. Besides these, numerous freight ships are building. Herr Heineken does not believe that a mercantile war will follow the present one, but he warns against too much optimism.

"The honorable merchants" of Hamburg protested in a meeting yesterday against any bureaucratization of import and export trade during the so-called transition period after the war. Only commercial circles, the society says in its resolution, are, by their experience in a position to deal to advantage with the mercantile situation after the wa

BLAMES HOUSEWIVES FOR HIGH FOOD PRICE

STORAGE PLANTS DEFENDED

Resolutions Adopted by 32 Organizations Favor Direct Sales to Consumer—Hearings Close.

Walter B. Timms of the Wholesale Grocers' Association yesterday told the Joint Legislative Committee, sitting in the City Hall, that the high cost of food was chiefly due to hoarding by overanxious housewives, and that prices were now beginning to decline.

"By Fall prices will be much lower," he said. "I am sorry that some of the women who have been here for the last two days are not here to hear that statement. They may not believe it, but it is true, nevertheless."

At the conclusion of the hearing, which was the last which the committee will hold before preparing the Food Control bill to be introduced into the special session of the Legislature, Senator Elon R. Brown, the committee's Chairman, said that he had been impressed by Mr. Timms's statement and was inclined to believe that living conditions were tending to get better rather than worse.

Mr. Timms said that the retail grocers had had a hard time recently and that, because of hoarding in homes, the supply of the wholesalers had been diminished. He thought that wholesale terminal markets operated in connection with retail public markets might help some, but he expressed the fear that a State law contemporaneous with a Federal food control law might do more harm than good.

Most of the time of the committee was given yesterday to wholesale and retail dealers, distributers, and storage men, and they were practically unanimous in warning the State against adopting food control legislation that might interfere with a Federal law. They wanted Washington, and not Albany, to play any important part that was played in Governmental food regulation.

Committee Gets Resolutions.

A decidedly contrary opinion was placed before the committee, however, in resolutions adopted on Wednesday by thirty-two leading charitable, philanthropic, and settlement organizations, and filed with the committee yesterday morning by Kenneth Widdemer of the Bowling Green Neighborhood Association.

These resolutions urged "that the State should give to each municipality or to some duly appointed commission the right to buy food direct from the producer or maker and sell it direct to the consumer through such channels as may seem best for the purpose, and that the State should either own or control storage warehouses (both cold and dry storage) located at various points through the State, where surplus crops may be stored and kept for use during periods of the year when such crops are scarce—in this way avoiding the frightful waste that now occurs."

Also the resolutions adopted on Wednesday afternoon at the meeting of housewives held in the Aldermanic Chamber of City Hall were presented, with arguments in their support, by Miss Sophie Irene Loeb. They urged strict State supervision of storage warehouses, municipal terminal markets, municipal control of milk distribution, and the authorization of a public commission to buy and sell food in the interest of the public. Miss Loeb predicted the conscription of men for farming as a means of guaranteeing the food supply.

W. T. Gerow, a fruit and vegetable dealer, challenged the statement said to have been made by George W. Perkins on Wednesday that food speculators had hoarded potatoes in freight cars in the Jersey City yards. He produced railroad reports to show that, between June 15 to 30 last, the period mentioned by Mr. Perkins, no cars of potatoes had been held in Jersey City at the request of receivers. He said that the potatoes had remained in the cars simply because of congestion in the yards and the inability of the railroad to unload them. Prices of potatoes did not rise during this period, he said, and some of those who owned the potatoes in cars lost money because of falling prices.

Cold Storage System Defended.

Frank A. Horne, President of the Merchants Refrigerating Company, who appeared as the representative of the New York State Cold Storage Association and the American Association of Refrigeration, defended the cold storage men from the popular charge that they were a party to price manipulation. Mr. Horne read a statement which was, in part, as follows:

"The public cold storage warehouses store for hire and do not own the products stored therein. The facilities of the cold storage warehouses of the State are open to all persons who may wish to avail themselves of the services of the storage companies, whether the quantity be large or small. The patrons of the cold storage warehouses of the State are competitors in handling food stuffs, reside in all parts of the United States and include all classes interested in the food supply.

"The vital and important function of cold storage is to preserve the surplus production of a given season so that the foods produced in flush abundance can be carried throughout the period of scant or no production, thus distributing the products throughout the year and lowering the average price to the consumer. In view of the present necessity for increased production of all our perishable foods, it is highly important that storage facilities should be developed and protected and not curtailed by drastic regulation."

Sanford T. Church, Chairman of the New York State Cold Storage Association, testified about the function of warehouses in producing centres, and opposed State regulation except as supplementary to Federal regulation of food and its distribution.

I. Elkin Nathans of the Milk Dealers' Conference Board, represented the milk distributers before the committee. He said that State legislation was not desirable except to permit the milk companies to co-operate in distribution under the supervision of a Government authority. He admitted that this co-operation of companies would, in his idea, include price fixing, but he insisted that all would be done under the Government's eye.

RAILROADS 'BIT' IN FOOD PLAN.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26. — Fairfax Harrison, Chairman of the Railroads' War Board, announced today that the railroads of the West and Middle West, owning millions of acres of land, had leased it all at nominal rentals for grazing purposes to aid the nation's food supply.

"To help increase the nation's food supply by utilizing as much idle ground as possible for grazing and agricultural purposes, the railroads of the West and Middle West are leasing at nominal rentals millions of acres of land which they own," Mr. Harrison's statement said. "Reports just made to the Railroads' War Board show that virtually all of the land owned by these roads which is not being used for operating purposes is now under cultivation or being used by live-stock owners for cattle grazing.

"In addition to leasing their land to farmers and cattlemen at a nominal rental, a number of railroads are offering garden plots, rent free, to families along their right of way. Others roads have offered big tracts of their idle land to States in which they operate. The Federal Government has also been offered 200,000 acres of 'cut-over' land in Wisconsin by the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railroad.

"Among the Western roads that are leasing all suitable land in their possession for agricultural and grazing purposes are the Northern Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Great Northern, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul. The Illinois Central is permitting free use of its land to all who wish to raise crops."

REPUBLICANS GIVE UP WAR COMMITTEE PLAN

Party Gathering Shows Marked Divisions—Conferees Begin on Food Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Republican members of the House practically abandoned today their fight to force the retention in the Food Control bill of the Senate amendment creating a joint committee of the two houses to supervise war expenditures. Republicans individually will oppose the striking out of this item by the conferees, but as a party the minority members of the House will take no stand upon it.

Following the brief session of the House today Representative Mann, the Republican floor leader, called a conference of Republican members to discuss party action on this Senate amendment to the bill. No formal action was taken, but the minority members were so divided in their views that the program for concerted action in behalf of the amendment fell through.

Representative Miller of Minnesota told the conference that no credit or partisan advantage would accrue to the Republican Party should it delay final approval of the food control measure. He is said to have piqued Mr. Mann by contending that Republican opposition so far had done the party no good.

Senate and House conferees on the bill began meetings today with each conferee pledging himself not to discuss the action taken until a report is ready. There is little doubt of the elimination of the amendment for a supervisory committee on war expenditures. In the first session general sentiment was said to be for disposal of the prohibition question first in order that the Finance Committee may be advised of any action which may affect revenues in connection with the War Tax bill.

In the House Representative Longworth of Ohio, Republican, dissented from President Wilson's statement that a Congressional committee during the civil war hampered President Lincoln.

"The President is unhappy in his comparison," said Mr. Longworth. "The civil war committee appointed by Congress dealt with broad matters of policy. We do not propose a partisan committee to deal with military operations and matters of policy, but to look into expenditures. Why should not Congress keep advised as to war expenditures? We have appropriated something like nine billion dollars for war, and now are asked for $5,000,000,000 more!"

Representative Cooper of Wisconsin said that "Congress has duties to perform as well as the President. He is mistaken in saying the creation of such a committee on expenditures would be a reflection upon him."

BRITAIN WILL JAIL FOOD PROFITEERS

Controller to Fix Prices on the Basis of Pre-War Margins of Gain.

MILLS TO BE TAKEN OVER

Subsidies Will Provide Cheaper Bread—Communal Kitchens to be Established.

LONDON, July 26.—Lord Rhondda, the Food Controller, outlining today the policy he intended to follow to regulate food prices and eliminate profiteering, said he would fix the prices of commodities of prime necessity over which he could obtain effective control, at all stages, from the producer to the consumer. Every effort would be made to prevent speculation, and unnecessary middlemen would be eliminated. Existing agencies would be utilized for the purpose of distribution under license and under the control and supervision of local food controllers to be appointed by the local authorities.

Where profits were made illegally, Lord Rhondda said, he would press for imprisonment in all cases of sufficient gravity. He proposed to eliminate profiteering by fixing prices on the basis of pre-war profits.

All flour mills, he announced, would be taken over and worked on the Government account, the flour being sold to bakers at a uniform price, and the bakers being expected to sell loaves over the counter at a maximum of 9 pence retail price and flour at a corresponding rate.

British wheat is to be purchased by millers at prices determined by the Government, these prices over the year averaging 72 shillings per quarter. The prices charged to millers for both home and imported wheat will be lower than the cost to the Government, and the difference will be made up by a subsidy from the Exchequer. The policy of subsidies is considered justifiable only because of the impossibility otherwise of reducing the cost of food to the poor.

Maximum prices of cattle will be fixed —74 shillings per hundredweight in September, 72 shillings in October, 67 shillings in November and December, and 60 shillings in January. This will enable the farmers to realize without serious losses and will reduce prices to the consumer. Dealers' and butchers' profits will also be controlled.

Retail prices will be fixed by local committees, and arrangements will be made for equitable distribution. The local authorities will be asked to appoint food control committees, including at least one representative or labor and one woman, these committees to be responsible for carrying out the regulations of the Food Controller.

A new scheme of sugar distribution, Lord Rhondda announced, would be put in operation, and another important feature of the economy campaign would be the establishment of communal kitchens.

NANSEN HERE TO PLEAD NORWAY'S FOOD NEEDS

Hopes Pledges Against Re-exportation Will Result in Lifting the Embargo.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, former Norwegian Ambassador to London, and known to all the world as an Arctic explorer, arrived yesterday at an Atlantic port from Christiania, accompanied by eight other prominent Norwegians, appointed by their Government as a special commission to the United States to discuss questions of food importation and exportation and to inform this Government of existing conditions in Norway.

Dr. Nansen said that the members of the commission were experts on foodstuffs, grain, and agriculture and were going to Washington in the hope of prevailing upon the Government to modify the embargo laws regarding Norway. He hopes to make an agreement similar to the one in effect with Great Britain for the exchange of commodities and tonnage.

"Norway is entirely dependent," he said, "on the United States for grain, fats, and sugar which were formerly supplied by Russia and Germany. The situation in Norway threatens to become serious. The prices of foodstuffs have gone up 300 to 400 per cent., and coal is $80 a ton. We must get from the United States 450,000 tons of wheat, rye, and barley yearly until normal conditions return, and coal from England and America.

"Norway is prepared to guarantee that she will neither export any of her own products nor re-export any products received from the United States to Germany, Sweden, or Denmark. The only foodstuff that is being exported now to Germany from Norway is fish, which is shipped with the consent of the British Government."

The other members of the commission are T. Nieling, T. Throne-Holst, J. Baumen, Ingrid Berg, C. Vogt, C. Borjer, A. Utret, and W. M. Morgensterner.

TO AID FRENCH FARMERS.

Academy of Agriculture Urges the Adoption of Motor Culture.

PARIS, July 26.—With the object of assuring France's agricultural development and preventing a labor crisis, the Academy of Agriculture has unanimously demanded of the authorities that vessels which are being used to carry food to the army in the Orient shall be employed on their return to bring phosphates from Algeria and Tunis.

The academy further requests that motor culture be introduced on large as well as small estates, that war material factories be instructed to employ their resources in labor for the construction of tractors as soon as an armistice is declared, and that schools of motor culture for the benefit of farmers be instituted in all districts.

PROMOTES GUNNERS WHO FOUGHT U-BOATS

Daniels Announces Reward for Men in Charge of Crews That Have Been in Action.

TWO OF THEM NEW YORKERS

Have Upheld All Traditions of Our Navy, Secretary Says In Commending Sailors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 26. — Secretary Daniels announced today that the Navy Department, after considering the reports of engagements between American armed merchant ships and German submarines, has decided to substantially reward the chief petty officers in charge of certain gun crews. The men to be so rewarded immediately are Andrew Copassaki, Harry Waterhouse, and William J. Clark. They will be tendered temporary warrants as gunners and boatswain in the navy, in addition to having received from the Navy Department letters of commendation for their gallantry in action. They commanded the naval gun crews of the American merchant vessels Moreni, Petrolite, and Silver Shell. Clark and Copassaki have their nearest kin living in New York. Waterhouse is a Pennsylvanian.

Andrew Copassaki, chief boatswain's mate, recently was transferred from the dreadnought Arizona to take charge of the gun crew of the steamship Moreni. He commanded its gun crew when that ship was sunk by a German submarine on the morning of June 12 last. This is the crew that put up such a splendid fight that they elicited words of admiration from the officer of the German submarine. Copassaki himself, when the ship was in flames fore and aft, rushed through the fire to the forward gun and continued to fire against the submarine until this gun was completely put out of commission. Copassaki was born in Greece, and has been in the navy about twenty years. His wife lives at 2,000 Daly Avenue, the Bronx. Secretary Daniels has sent this letter to Copassaki:

"The department has read with deep interest your report of July 16, 1917, reciting the details of the engagement between the steamship Moreni and a German submarine on the morning of June 12, 1917.

"The splendid fight you and the men under your command made against the submarine and your personal courage in going through the flames to the forward gun and continuing to fire against the submarine while the entire ship was in flames, and until the gun was placed out of commission, is worthy of the best traditions of the service, and it is with great pleasure that the department extends to you its hearty commendation for your gallantry in action.

"I feel that you are deserving of every advantage that the service can offer you, and I am glad to tender you herewith a temporary warrant as a boatswain."

Harry Waterhouse, a chief turrent Captain, recently was transferred from the dreadnaught New York. He was in charge of the armed crew of the Petrolite, which was sunk by a U-boat on June 10, 1917. The merchant ship sank so rapidly that the guns could not be used. The navy men, however, under the command of Waterhouse, assisted in getting out the boats and lowering them and getting the crew to safety, although the ship went over on her beam ends in less than a minute. No member of the armed guard left the sinking ship until ordered to do so by Waterhouse. Waterhouse has been tendered a temporary warrant as a gunner.

Waterhouse was born in Sunbury, Penn., and has been in the navy about seventeen years. His mother, Mrs. Emma Waterhouse, lives at Catawissa, Penn.

William J. Clark, a chief turret Captain, recently was transferred from the Dreadnought Arkansas. He had charge of the armed guard on the Silver Shell, which is credited with having been the first American ship to sink a German submarine.

The Captain of the Silver Shell reports that the deliberate shooting and accuracy of the last shots were due entirely to the perfect control that Clark had over his gun crew. The twenty-fifth shot fired by Clark's crew is said to have been the one which ended the career of the submarine. Clark will be advanced to acting Warrant Gunner. He was born in Peabody, Mass., and has been in the navy about eight years. His wife, Mrs. Nellie Clark, lives at 100 East 110th Street, New York City.

Secretary Daniels has sent this letter to Waterhouse:

"The department has read with interest your report of July 4, 1917, reciting the details of the sinking of the steamship Petrolite by a German submarine on June 10, 1917. The department has particularly noted your statement that the navy crew which composed the armed guard of that vessel acted in all particulars as they should, and that the navy men all worked to get out the lifeboats, and not withstanding the ship went over on her beam ends in less than a minute, no enlisted man of the navy was lowered into the boats nor did they leave the vessel until you had given the orders to abandon ship. The conduct of yourself and the crew under your command shows that the department's trust in your ability was not misplaced.

"It is with great pleasure that the department extends to you its hearty commendation for your gallantry in action, and I am glad to tender you herewith a temporary warrant as a gunner."

Secretary Daniels has sent this letter to Clark:

"The department has received the report regarding the engagement between the merchant ship Silver Shell and a German submarine on June 30, 1917, and heartily commends you for your conduct during this engagement, in which, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it seems sure that the submarine which attacked the Silver Shell was sunk by a shot from the gun under your command.

"The Captain of the Silver Shell reports that you controlled the fire of your gun absolutely, and the deliberate shooting and accuracy of the last shots, which sunk the submarine, where entirely due to the perfect control you had over the gun crew.

"I take great pleasure in offering to you herewith a temporary warrant as a gunner."

American Observer in London Urges Us to Rush a Host of Chasers.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 26.—In considering methods to combat the U-boats, both the submarine losses and the new tonnage should be definitely known. The real point is the disparity between the two. The Washington Government has all the facts and figures, but is disposed to put the situation up to the British Navy, which is already using all its resources.

We should send immediately the destroyers now uselessly patrolling the Atlantic seaboard, and every ocean tug and craft of every kind with a speed of twenty knots and over and capable of carrying two or more guns. Such help might enable the Allies to organize and maintain a protecting lane across the Atlantic that would hold the losses below the figures of new construction.

If the submarine is thus checked Germany is defeated, because the way is opened for transporting an American Army as well as food and supplies for the armies and the civilian population. Germany will probably weaken if hit hard on the submarine spot, despite the showing she is now making under the Michaelis Government.

INQUISITIVE SAMMY LOSES RIGHT HAND

TROOPS TRAIN TOGETHER

Men in Khaki and Men in Blue Drill and Dig Side by Side.

By The Associated Press.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE, July 26.—The first field casualty among the American forces occurred yesterday. A soldier became too inquisitive in regard to the construction of a live French bomb among the supplies brought to camp for training purposes. He extracted the safety pin in some manner, and very soon thereafter a loud explosion occurred. Fortunately for the soldier, the bomb did not contain a charge of full battle strength, or he would have been blown to pieces. As it was, he escaped with the loss of his right hand.

At every vantage point near the camp men in khaki and men in blue could be seen today, drilling, marching, and digging side by side. Field manoeuvres were in progress at several places, while from more secluded spots came the rattle of machine guns. Musketry practice was being held, and on every hand was activity which was most impressive. The French and American soldiers seem to enjoy their association thoroughly. The French frankly admire the aptitude of their enthusiastic pupils.

Visits to the French front undoubtedly will be quite frequent in the future, in order that American officers may acquaint themselves with conditions of life on the front line in its various phases, including routine as well as the actual working out of offensive and defensive plans.

The French Government has extended to the American soldier free use of the French mails. So, if similar arrangements are made in America the members of the United States expeditionary force can send letters or postcards home without any charge whatever. If it is desired, there is no doubt that similar postal arrangements can be made with Great Britain, for such reciprocity exists between Great Britain and France already.

The soldiers rejoiced today over the arrival of a large consignment of tobacco from America. French cigaretties, cigars, and smoking tobacco have not appealed strongly to the American soldiers, and there was a temporary shortage of the familiar brands from home.

Y. M. C. A. headquarters have been established near the base, and it is expected that the work of this organization will be expanded rapidly, the need of amusement for the men being already marked. The Red Cross has sent over large supplies of baseballs, bats, and gloves, and is also making provision to furnish the men with moving picture machines and films.

Rest Stations for Americans.

PARIS, July 26.—Officials of the American Red Cross expect before the end of this week to complete the installation of some dozen infirmaries and rest stations along the route followed by American troops between the port of debarkation and the permanent training camps.

The process of moving troops under present conditions occupies hours, and the Red Cross reports that diseases are apt to develop. It will, therefore, be its policy to station a nurse at each of the stations, which will be equipped with ten beds apiece and designated by the Quartermaster's Department as food and rest points.

Officers in charge of shifting troops will turn over to the nurses all soldiers who become ill and the men will be placed in French hospitals, visited daily, and given attention and small luxuries until they are able to rejoin their companies.

SAYS HE LANDED FIRST.

East Orange Lad Asserts He Dived from Transport in French Harbor.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., July 26. — Herbert MacLusky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert MacLuskey of East Orange, says he was the first member of the American Expeditionary Force to reach French soil when the transports steamed into a French harbor on June 19. He dived overboard from the lower deck of his ship and swam ashore.

The young man, who is 27 years old, enlisted in the Naval Reserve Corps. Just before the transports sailed from this country the third engineer of a liner which had been taken over by the Government quit, and MacLusky received the berth.

TWO GERMAN SHIPS SUNK.

Two Others Taken to England by British Destroyers.

AMSTERDAM, July 26.—Two German vessels have been sunk and two German steamers have been taken to England by British destroyers, according to the correspondent at Texel, one of the Frisian Islands, of the Amsterdam Telegraaf. A German steamship which had been torpedoed, the correspondent adds, has arrived at Denhelder.

A dispatch received here on Wednesday from Amsterdam said that the German steamer Norderney had been torpedoed in the North Sea and was aground off the Frisian Islands.

PLATTSBURG MEN MAY ENTER REGULAR ARMY

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG, July 26. — Although the situation concerning the number of commissions to be awarded Plattsburg candidates was cleared somewhat today by a telegram from Adjt. Gen. McCain, there still will be several hundred men who will be crowded out unless additional commissions are authorized. By allowing the 600 applicants for the 120 provisional second lieutenancies in the regular army to select to go with the regular army as reserve lieutenants, the Adjutant General's telegram brings the total number of commissions to be filled by Plattsburg men up to about 3,450. The following is a part of General McCain's telegram to Colonel Wolf:

"All men recommended for provisional second lieutenants, regular army, after the first sixty, may select to go to the regular army as reserve lieutenants with the contingent of sixty. Those who so elect, but ultimately fail to be appointed in the regular army because of lack of sufficient vacancies, will nevertheless continue with the regular army as extra officers for duration of the war and eligible for promotion."

The telegram also gives officers' boards the authority to list additional recommendations of men qualified for appointment as reserve officers who otherwise would be sent to aviation schools, or to second training camps for further instruction or discharged, but the telegram concludes "No assurance of commissions or active service can be given at present time."

With 3,450 commissions now open to the 4,600 men in camp and the possibility that a maximum of 200 men may be discharged as lacking an officer's qualifications, there remain about 950 men who must either take up aviation or take their chances of being discharged.

It was announced at the beginning of the training camp that all men who qualified would receive reserve commissions, but with the exception of those designated to officer the first draft of the national army, they would return to civil life until called to active duty. Adherence to this first announcement, in the opinion of company instructors, would give the remaining eligibles chances for reserve officers' commissions.

Seventeen candidates have been detailed to leave Saturday for the ground school of aviation at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. They are: S. R. Chatfield, K. E. Dimick, J. G. Strobridge, A. Sedgewick, P. S. York, H. B. Caldwell, Battery 1; L. Q. Clowes, Battery 2; L. H. Graham, Battery 3, and H. R. Clapp of the New England Regiment, and J. C. Millard of 600 West 140th Street, J. Coletti, 242 East Thirty-second Street; G. Finnie, 227 East Fiftieth Street; J. M. Crummey, 110 West Seventy-first Street; S. W. Butter of Poughkeepsie, E. S. Foster, 1 Madison Avenue, P. E. Hassinger, Mount Vernon, and W. S. Callaghan, 229 East Fifty-fifth Street.

Saturday night Bennie Leonard, lightweight champion of the world, and Johnnie Dundee will appear in the training camp amphitheatre to spar all comers from the guardsmen and members of the training camp.

U-BOAT VICTIMS ARRIVE.

One hundred and twenty-four officers and seamen from five American vessels which had been torpedoed or bombed by German submarines and the crew of one schooner that had caught fire and been beached in France arrived last night at an American port with very little clothing except what they walked ashore in.

They were: Captain E. A. Forsyth and eighteen of the crew of the steamship Kansan, which was sunk on July 9 off the French coast with the loss of four men; Captain Allan Tucker and thirty-two of the crew of the steamship Orleans, torpedoed on July 6 in the Bay of Biscay, near the mouth of the Gironde, with the loss of four men; the Captain and thirty-one of the steamship Massapequa, torpedoed on July 7; Captain Johansen and fifteen of the crew of the schooner Addie M. Lawrence, sunk off the French coast on July 7; eleven of the crew of the schooner Mary V. Bowen, sunk by shell fire on July 12 off Brest, and Captain H. G. Newcombe and twelve of the crew of the six-masted schooner Edward B. Winslow, which caught fire and was beached on the rocks off Ste. Nazaire, on July 10.

Captain Newcombe felt his loss keenly. He said that it was the hardest luck, after escaping the submarines and making a twenty-four-day passage across to France, to find the hold full of blazing cotton, with the French pilot on board and the harbor in sight.

"I believe that the fire was caused by a time fuse placed in the hold among the bales of cotton in Boston," he said, "because it must have been burning for over a week before we discovered the blaze. There is, of course, the usual theory of spontaneous combustion, but I am inclined to the other opinion. She was a splendid vessel, and will be a total loss. Some of the cargo may be salvaged."

America's oil fields are already showing signs of exhaustion. "The Bureau of Mines," says Dr. Manning, "has for a number of years appreciated the seriousness of the motor-fuel problem."

America without gasoline in 27 years?

"According to the United States Geologic Survey, our future supply of petroleum will only last us from twenty-seven to thirty years. In order to supply fuel for future automobiles, it will be necessary to make better use of our crude oil production than we have in the past." (From a recent speech by Dr. Van H. Manning, Director of U. S. Bureau of Mines.)

The Tide Water Oil Company announces that it has succeeded in making better use of crude oil. Their Production Expert has perfected a new gasoline that vaporizes fast. It gives increased mileage and added power. It is called Tydol.

Why low-grade or sluggish gasoline wastes fuel

(1)—Common, low-grade gasoline of 56° to 58° gravity.

A large percentage of such gasoline never becomes vapor at all. That unvaporized gasoline cannot explode and cannot help drive your engine. It is waste fuel. To produce even fair results, sluggish gasoline requires a "rich," wasteful mixture. Generally only 8 parts of air to 1 part of fuel can be used.

Unvaporized gasoline means low gasoline mileage and wasted money. It also means excess carbon, sticky piston rings, gummed-up valves and diluted lubricating oil. It is the principal cause of a sluggish engine.

The new economy gasoline —uses 15 to 1 mixture

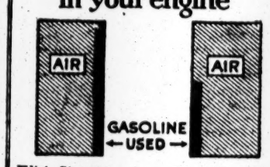
It is made to give best results in a 15 to 1 mixture of air and fuel. 15 parts of air to 1 part of gasoline. That is the most efficient mixture for every automobile. The February 1917 Bulletin of the Society of Automobile Engineers shows that 15 to 1 is scientifically correct for all speeds and all loads.

What really explodes in your engine



With Sluggish Gasoline	With Tydol The New Gasoline
8 parts of air to 1 part gasoline	15 parts of air to 1 part gasoline

Sluggish gasoline requires a rich, wasteful mixture—only 8 parts of air to 1 part of gasoline. This rich mixture causes low gasoline mileage, soots up spark slugs and forms excess carbon deposits.

Tydol is made to work best in a mixture using 15 parts of air to 1 part of Tydol. Notice that with Tydol you can use less gasoline and more air.

Tydol works best at 15 to 1. That means maximum power and mileage and easy starting. It burns up clean and reduces carbon. Thus it eliminates many engine troubles.

How motorists can save gasoline

The diagram shows how Tydol saves fuel. On the left is an 8 to 1 mixture of air and sluggish gasoline. On the right, the Tydol economy mixture—15 parts of air to 1 of gasoline. Notice the marked saving.

With Tydol and a proper adjustment of your carburetor you will use less fuel and more air than with low-grade gasoline.

Tydol has these unique properties because it is made by the Edwards System, a series of processes developed and used by the Tide Water Oil Company.

The Society of Automobile Engineers' Bulletin mentioned herein tells how to adjust the amount of gasoline fed by your carburetor.

Before making the adjustment fill the gasoline tank with Tydol and run your engine for a few minutes until it is warm.

Then with your car standing still and the engine running, follow the directions given in the S. A. E. Bulletin:

"Decrease the quantity of gasoline until the engine loses power. Then give more gasoline until good power is restored, but not a notch beyond that point."

With Tydol, this adjustment gives you the 15 to 1 mixture. Because Tydol is made in such a way that it works best in a 15 to 1 mixture.

To be sure you have the 15 to 1 mixture use Tydol. Sluggish gasoline usually back-fires on a mixture leaner than 8 to 1. Tydol gives you greatest economy and efficiency.

Where you can buy Tydol

Not all New York dealers sell Tydol. It is sold by progressive high-grade garages. Ask your garage man to try for a Tydol Agency. Meanwhile look for the orange and black sign.

If you do not find Tydol for sale where you ask for it, write us and we will see that you are supplied.

FIRST DRAFT QUOTA TO REPORT IN WEEK

GUARD AGAINST SLACKERS

U. S. Army Recruiting Officers Find 100 Fictitious Names and Addresses on Registration Cards.

The official master lists to be used by the local exemption boards in making up their first quotas of men called for examination as to their fitness for the military service of the United States are expected to reach New York this afternoon. The notifications to the men called for examination will then be mailed, the first third of those called for examination being ordered to appear Friday morning of next week, the second third Saturday, and the last third Monday morning.

Roscoe Conkling, Deputy Attorney General, and his assistants were kept busy yesterday explaining the regulations to board members in all parts of the city. Many registrants called for information, as did also a large number of women, the latter, as a rule, calling to ascertain what procedure should be followed in claiming exemption for husband, brother, or son. Mr. Conkling told all the women that every man called must appear for examination and that the question of exemption would be settled by the board, and that in no case would any favoritism be shown to any man.

Mr. Conkling's attention was called to a report that an organizatoin has been formed by a number of men who style themselves "conscientious objectors" and that it is the intention of this organization to make the case of the first of their number called for service a test case in the courts.

"The function of this office," replied Mr. Conkling, "is merely to supervise the work of the local boards. Of course, no obstruction or hindrance of the work of any board will be tolerated. I want to say, however, that I do not believe there will be any serious opposition to the enforcement of the provisions of the selective draft law in this city."

Not Easy to Gain Exemption.

"Have you heard of any districts in which the exemption claims may prove to be so many that the entire available list in that district may be exhausted before the required quota can be supplied?" Mr. Conkling was asked last night.

"No, I have had no such case as that brought to my attention," Mr. Conkling replied, "but don't lose sight of the fact that it is one thing to claim exemption and a very different thing to get exempted. Before a man can be exempted he will have to prove his case. It might be well to call attention to the fact that, from the time a man's name is posted as among those called for examination, that man becomes a member of the United States Army.

"Does that mean that a man who fails to report when called will be court-martialed?"

"Yes, it means just that. I may also add that a man who makes a false affidavit in seeking exemption will be guilty of perjury, and the punishment for that crime is five years in prison or $2,000 fine, or both. Any persons who aids, counsels, or in other ways assists a man of draft age to avoid the service will be guilty of the same crime. As for a man failing to report when called, that man will be a deserter, and desertion in time of war is a very serious thing."

For the benefit of medical examiners attached to the local boards Mr. Conkling announced that three well-known physicians have volunteered to act in an advisory capacity in aiding the examiners to solve perplexing questions. These physicians are Dr. Victor C. Pedersen, President of the New York Branch of the American Urological Society; Dr. Frederick W. Smith, Secretary of the Urological Society, and Dr. J. T. Krause, Medical Examiner of the Board of Education.

"Indispensable" City Employes.

Mayor Mitchel has taken up with the heads of departments the question of exempting city employes who are subject to the Federal draft, in a letter to the department heads he asked that a list of employes who are deemed "indispensable" be submitted immediately. The letter states that there is obvious danger that some employes will themselves urge their indispensability as a ground for exemption and that the responsible heads of departments must decide this point. The letter reads:

The Mayor will approve applications under the Fenner law for permission to enlist by employes likely to be drafted even though they must be replaced by substitutes, provided they are unwilling to or cannot urge grounds for exemption by reason of dependents and provided they are not indispensable to the city service. Will you please submit immediately a complete list of all officers and employes of your department, bureau, or office who have been drawn under the Federal conscription law in the serial order of their draft in their respective exemption districts.

No applications for discharges will be committed to exemption boards on behalf of employes by the Mayor or by department heads unless such employes are indispensable to the city service. The fact that the services of a given employe must be rendered by a substitute if not by him does not establish the indispensability of the employe. The indispensability must be personal to the employe and not applicable merely to the service which he renders.

Work of the Mayor's Committee.

The Mayor's Committee on National Defense yesterday gave an accounting of its stewardship of the draft in New York City. It told of many difficulties encountered and of changes that had to be made in the original Federal plans to deal with the problems arising peculiarly in this city.

Outlining the work accomplished by the committee, Thomas L. Chadbourne, Jr., the Chairman, said yesterday:

"The Mayor's Committee on National Defense has been assisting in the work connected with the Federal draft since its inception. The work of registering was done entirely by volunteer city employes, selected by the department heads. The City of New York is proud to record the services of these men, of whom there were about 6,000 or more, and who, as registrars or members of the Assembly district, borough and city boards, were furnished without expense to the city.

"We warmly appreciate the self-sacrificing labor of all of them. Not only did the municipal employes engaged work day after day and night after night, beyond their office hours, but their fellows who remained at their desks were compelled to perform double duties. The functions of the various boards of registration terminated under the law when the cards were turned over to the exemption boards."

Army officers at the recruiting headquarters, 280 Broadway, within the last week or so have found that more than 100 men liable to draft have given fictitious names or addresses when they registered. This was discovered in this way: Men have come in to the offices to talk about recruiting; they have said that they would come in within a few days to enlist, and have left their registration cards. These cards have been kept until the specified time was up, and then mailed to the address given on them. More than 100 have been returned with the information that the person whose name appeared on the card did not live at the address.

Major Hughes of the recruiting staff said that it was hard to explain just what these men were after in the recruiting office. He thought perhaps in some cases they were seeking rejection so as to obtain a card or document stating they were unfit. Major Hughes said that the recent demand for buttons or cards stating that men were disqualified for service had been suspiciously large and that he had refused to issue any such credentials.

STILL CONSIDER STATUS OF ALIENS IN THE DRAFT

WASHINGTON, July 26.—It was officially admitted today that the State Department had submitted an opinion to the War Department regarding the question of whether the foreign residents of the United States, other than German and Austrian born subjects, are to be included in the draft for the national army.

But officials declined to say whether the State Department was in favor of or opposed to the pending measures of legislation which would call for the drafting of aliens who had not taken out their first papers to become naturalized American citizens. It is understood that at least three countries—Japan, Serbia, and Italy—are already protected by treaty from the drafting of their nationals in this country and that the State Department has deemed it wise and proper to institute negotiations with the Governments whose citizens and subjects might be affected before proceeding to enforce the proposed legislation if it is enacted. No such negotiations have yet been begun.

Should the United States draft the nationals of other countries now at war who are residents of this country and have not taken out first papers, it is asserted that it would then be difficult to stop those countries from drafting American citizens for service in their armies unless there is a specific treaty agreement to the contrary.

Brig. Gen. Enoch Crowder, the Provost Marshal General, tonight issued a statement for the purpose of correcting some erroneous notions regarding the procedure to be followed by those who are called for examination under the draft.

"Complete instructions," said General Crowder, "for the guidance of persons registered may be obtained from any of the several exemption boards. The questions most usually asked relate to a change in the place of physical examination and discharge claim hearing. As soon as a person who expects to continue absent for some time from his place of registration learns that he has been called on the first draft, he should apply in writing under section 29 of the Exemption Regulations to the local board having present jurisdiction over him and request that on account of his necessary absence an order issue from that board directing him to appear, for physical examination and exemption or discharge claim, if any, before the board in whose jurisdiction he now is. This request should designate definitely the board before which he wants to appear, for instance, Local Exemption Board for Division No. 3, Washington, D. C.

"Another question commonly asked relates to the procedure in case of claim for discharge on the ground of industry or agriculture. The regulations are explicit that only the upper or district board has jurisdiction over an industrial or agricultural claim for discharge. Before one has a standing before the district board, however, he must first be certified to it by the local or lower board as held for service—that is, he must have been found physically qualified for service and must have had any discharge claim made before the lower board decided adversely to him. He has five days after he is certified to the upper board in which to file claim for discharge on industrial or agricultural grounds, and five days after the filing of the claim in which to file proof of his claim. It should be remembered that all claims for exemption or discharge, except claims for discharge on industrial or agricultural grounds, are decided originally by the local or lower board."

Reports of the first selections boards to fill their quotas are eagerly awaited by Washington officials, because they will give the first definite information as to the probable percentage of rejections to be expected among the 10,000,000 registrants for physical reasons or for dependents.

All available statistics indicate a probable rejection of one in every four for physical disability. In particular localities this will vary greatly, but the average for the whole country is expected to be between 25 and 30 per cent. There are no available data as to dependents, however, or as to how many must be excused under industrial exemptions.

YOUNG WIFE ALSO ENLISTS.

Husband Drafted, So Mrs. Anshen Joins Naval Reserve.

Mrs. Harold Anshen, twenty-two years old, of 398 Clinton Avenue, Newark, has joined the Naval Reserve as clerk. Mrs. Anshen decided to be of service to the Government after it became known that her husband had been drafted. The young woman asserted that if her husband could be of service to the country, she could too. Accordingly she applied to the Third Naval District in New York.

After her husband's draft number, "564," was published Mrs. Anshen was informed that she had been appointed a clerk in the Navy Department. The young woman is a graduate of the New Brunswick High School and her husband, who is manager of the Newark branch of a large printing concern, is a graduate of Rutgers College.

PRO-GERMAN PAPER RIDICULES AMERICA

O'LEARY WRITES FOR IT

Attention of Federal Authorities Called to Publication Attacking Government's War Policy.

The attention of the Federal authorities was drawn yesterday to a publication bearing the name of "Bull," which is published from 50 Fifth Avenue, the building containing the office of the American Truth Society, an organization which was active in the last campaign in putting forth documents favorable to Germany. The publication sells at 15 cents a copy, and the principal article in the August issue was written by Jeremiah A. O'Leary, head of the American Truth Society.

In the August issue the United States and President Wilson are cartooned and attacked in articles, while all of the allied nations are made the subject of ridicule. Those Americans of German origin who have advised their fellows to stand by the United States in this war are denounced, Herman A. Metz being the object of the most bitter of these attacks.

On the first page is a cartoon entitled "The United States Pawnshop." Over the door appears this sign, "Democratic money exchanged for monarchical securities," while another sign, posted on the door, reads: "American independence exchanged for royal bunk and junk."

In the door stands "Uncle Sam," while just about to enter is King George in tattered clothing. King George is leading a dog labeled "Arthur," the head of the animal being that of Mr. Balfour.

Another cartoon shows a ship at sea, named "American Independence," submarine is about to sink the ship, and the words on the torpedo which is shown on its way are "British influence."

Another cartoon is directed against President Wilson and the American people, the latter represented in the picture by a rat. The cartoon shows President Wilson standing between a lion and a rat. The lion is eating all the "American food in sight," while President Wilson with a stick keeps the rat away.

"Do I get any?" the rat asks the President.

Another cartoon shows Vice Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., the American naval commander in European waters, prostrate before King George, while still another is captioned "On Thin Ice." This picture showed the President skating on a field of ice and cutting a figure which spells "autocratic rule." From a hole in the icefield protrudes the head of the late Czar of Russia, the intimation being that the fate of Russia's late ruler awaits President Wilson.

Herman A. Metz is denounced because he refused to have anything to do with the Bull and denied it his support when an agent called upon him. Asked why he refused, Mr. Metz said that in this war he was for the United States and against Germany. Carl Schurz is also the subject of denunciation and is referred to as a "counterfeit" who is supporting Mayor Mitchel for re-election.

The Union News Company and Ward and Gow are also attacked because they refused to handle Bull.

'FAUST' AGAIN AT COLUMBIA.

Gounod's "Faust," the opera above all others that Metropolitan audiences delighted to honor in the days of the De Reszkes, Melba, Calvé, and Eames, and a work worth its place beside some others more recently sung by Farrar and Caruso, drew a fine attendance at Columbia University's gymnasium last evening in the second half of the current Summer opera season. This was the second and last hearing as far as "Faust" is concerned.

Henry Weldon, a Mephisto on whom the mantle of Plançon has fallen, was in better voice than last Saturday, when his distinguished treatment of the "perfect gentleman" in red tights and cock's plume had won praise, in spite of an unseasonable cold. Maggie Teyte again was a winsome Marguerite, appearing for the last time in this series. Gaudenzi, Bouillez, Miss Wakefield, and others assisted, as did the Metropolitan chorus, the orchestra under Charlier, and a troupe of supernumeraries drilled to the hour by Alberieri.

Marie Valle, it was announced, will sing Tonio in "Pagliacci" on Saturday night, when Claudia Muzio appears as Nedda, and a young American girl, Helene Rogers, is to make her operatic début as Lola in "Cavalleria." Repetitions of both "Tosca" and the double bill will end the series next week.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The date for the first performance of "The Inner Man," Abraham Schomer's new drama, in which Wilton Lackaye has the principal role, has been changed from Monday, Aug. 6, to the following night to avoid conflicting with the premiere of "Mary's Ankle" at the Bijou.

The Screen Club, whose membership consists of men engaged in all branches of the motion-picture industry, will give an entertainment Sunday night at the Casino for the benefit of its clubhouse fund. The entertainment will be an annual event, and will be known as a "Reel." Many players of the screen and stage will contribute to the program.

The Columbia Theatre will begin its new season Monday afternoon, Aug. 6, with the presentation of a new burlesque show called "The Burlesque Review." The regular policy of weekly change of attraction will be adhered to.

Anten Heindl has been engaged by Edward B. Perkins to conduct the orchestra for his forthcoming musical production, "The Red Clock." Mr. Heindl was musical director at the Century last season.

The title of the operetta adapted from the German "Wie Einst Im Mai" has been changed from "'Twas Once in May" to "Maytime."

The 400th performance of "The Man Who Came Back" will be reached tonight at the Playhouse.

THE RUSSIAN DANGER.

The behavior of the Russian troops in Northern Galicia presents the picture of man in about his lowest degradation. Individual man can bring himself to the gutter by his vices, but that is a very different matter. Here an entire army either refused to obey the orders of its officers to advance against the enemy, or deserted and fled before the enemy approached, leaving guns, ammunition, immense stores of material of war to fall into the hands of the Germans, and shooting down comrades who attempted to check its flight. This is unsurpassable degradation, because these creatures had lost all sense of shame; they yielded in a body to the solicitation of cowardice, the unpardonable sin for a soldier.

Perhaps the responsibility might justly be placed upon the old imperial régime, which was so much concerned with the foreign and dynastic policies that it never took thought about improving the condition of the Russian people, certainly not about establishing public schools where they could get the rudiments of an education. This enormous mass of Russian ignorance has been played upon by Socialists, anarchists, terrorists, and all sorts of agitators who were apt students in the German school of social overthrow; it has been fed upon the senile vaporings of TOLSTOY; and the agitators who influenced it have been imbued with the doctrines of internationalism, the deadly foe of national character and patriotism. The whole brood of socialistic doctrines comes here to a supreme test that has proved their falsity and hollowness. Professing desires and principles for the uplift and happiness of the masses, these doctrines have brought the Russian people perilously near to complete social disorganization, anarchy, and ruin.

The danger may be averted, the damage may not be beyond repair, but if KERENSKY can turn the tide he will prove himself worthy of the hero's crown, he will become one of the world's great men. The danger to Russia, whose revolution came much too soon for her good, is great and obvious, but the disaster to the cause of the Allies is one that can be repaired only by giant efforts and at enormous cost. It will be repaired. Whatever advantage Germany may temporarily gain must in the end be overcome, for short of her defeat there is no end to the war.

The Paris conference of the representatives of the Allied Powers may make decisions intended to meet the new danger. That the great British and French forces holding the line from Saloniki westward may be withdrawn to reinforce the troops holding the Germans in check in France and Belgium is at present merely a surmise. There are some indications that this course will be taken. It would bring more than half a million men to the west front, where the Germans are already overmatched in numbers. This would serve to offset any transfer of forces which Germany, because of the Russian failure, might feel free to make from the eastern line to the west. Moreover, it would release for other use a great deal of shipping now employed in transporting supplies to Saloniki.

Since the Russians began to give way, the plan of the northern advance to relieve Rumania has had to be abandoned. Serbia is already for the most part in possession of the enemy. Greece, VENIZELOS declares, is at war with the Central Powers. The Allies, of course, would not leave her undefended. She has an army of some 300,000 men, and of the British and French forces enough would be left in the east to co-operate with the Greek Army against any Austrian or Bulgarian attack in that quarter. The position would not be very secure, but nothing has so far been accomplished by the large allied forces dispatched months ago to Saloniki, and the need upon the western front is probably felt to be urgent. Germany already knows that we have troops in France, she knows that their number will be rapidly increased until our contributions to the British and French lines from the sea to Switzerland will be substantial, a reinforcement to be reckoned with. Fortunes of every great war are changeable. Just now we are passing through a time of disappointment and trial for ourselves and our allies, but it brings no discouragement. In us and our allies it inspires a sterner resolve to meet every demand, to be unsparing in effort and sacrifice until victory be assured.

IN THE LAST STAGE.

The action of the House of Representatives in sending the Food Control bill to conference without any other delay than that caused by Mr. MANN'S motion was most commendable. We say this in face of Mr. LENROOT'S complaint that the prevention of debate by the Rules Committee was unprecedented. We fancy that so good a parliamentarian as Mr. LENROOT, and so competent a politician, will make up his mind, now that he has relieved himself of his argument in the form of a statement to the press, that there has been enough debate already on a measure which ought to have had the President's signature a month ago. He will probably be thankful that his emotions were not permitted to transform him temporarily into an obstructionist. He should be willing to leave to the Senate the odium of "holding up" a war measure. To be sure, there were able arguments made in the Senate in favor of the immediate acceptance of the bill. A speech by Senator PAUL O. HUSTING of Wisconsin on July 17 was clear enough to move all but the Senators bent upon delay. It covered the whole ground. But under the Senate rules the objectors were able to keep up the fight four days longer, and then to return the bill to the House in a crippled condition. The country is to be congratulated on the refusal of the House to be caught in a trap.

Its conferees have not been held down by instructions, as it was feared they would be. They are empowered to make compromises, if the bill cannot be put through without compromise. They will first settle the liquor dispute, so that the Finance Committees may know how to proceed with the Revenue bill. They will endeavor to eliminate that objectionable rider, acceptance of which the President will take as an expression of lack of confidence, and they will try to restore one-man control. The ridiculous amendment providing for a high minimum price for wheat can hardly stand. Nevertheless, the conference should not be unduly prolonged. If the conferees are willing to work over the bill night and day, they should finish quickly. The country needs a workable food control law.

CONGRESS IN WAR.

The proposed joint committee upon war expenditures is fit for the fate which met a similar proposal to the British Parliament. The Government declined even to discuss the matter, and it did not reach debate, still less a vote. It is as much the business of the Executive Department to spend money as it is of the Legislative Department to provide it. If the money is wrongly spent, there is a remedy in the punishment of the responsible official, whatever his grade. But if the money is provided badly, either in excess or deficiency, or raised in poor methods, the country has no recourse. As the matter stands now, the money is being spent better than it is being provided. The proposal, therefore, to oversee the functions of the Executive is a proposal to meddle with matters which do not belong to the Legislature without cause shown. And the Legislature is discharging its own duties in a manner open to criticism.

If the conference should turn the Committee on Expenditures into a Committee on Appropriations, the country would applaud a proposal so necessary. There is a Committee on Appropriations, but it is so shorn of its rightful duties that its Chairman the other day offered to resign in order that it might be reorganized. Its original and proper work is now divided among eight committees, and no committee which appropriates money has charge of raising the money. It is not possible to place responsibility for such a bill as the River and Harbor bill, which contains all sorts of proposals brought together in a manner known to nobody. It is no wonder that Congress is never able to trust anybody with power to spend money when it is aware of its own deficiencies in the matter of raising money. The history of the deterioration of the House in the matter of appropriations is well known. It is a matter of politics, not of finance. It was desired to take control of legislation from the Speaker, and it was done with full foresight of what the result would be. Speakers of both parties said in debate that it would cost millions, and the record shows that has happened. Comparison of the periods before and after the change of method shows that the growth of appropriations has been several times the rate of growth of the country. Now arises a situation when there is the greates need of large appropriations in the most skillful manner, and the House is considering supervising expenditures without reforming its own procedure.

If the country is to raise twenty billions without discomfort, there is need of a plan which shall prevent such disorderly procedure. There cannot be well balanced appropriations by eight committees, modified by freedom for the adoption of personal eccentricities of proposals. It is scandalous that any individual should be allowed to make proposals affecting the country's revenue by hundreds of millions, and with freedom to hide his personal accountability behind the votes of his colleagues. It is beyond patient endurance that there is no authoritative adjustment of the proportion between the billions which must be raised by taxation and the billions which must be borrowed. There should be an authority beyond dispute to decide upon principles and formulas and control action by minor bodies. The right of initiative in this matter lies with the House. There is not the least objection to the House's rivaling the Senate in competition for public approval and taking back the prestige of the House by the excellence of its proposals.

Our Executive is not responsible to Congress, like the British Executive. Our Executive is responsible to the law for misconduct and to the country for errors of policy. Congress does not appoint the officials who spend the money it appropriates. In England the similar proposal was rejected for fear that it would "slow down the administrative machine," in Mr. SAMUELS'S words. Our effort should be rather to quicken the legislative machine into the better performance of duties now so supremely important.

GERMANY AND THE NEUTRALS.

The British Prize Court has released two cargoes, nearly 4,000,000 pounds, of American dried fruit seized on their way to Sweden, which has been importing such fruit from the United States for the benefit of Germany. It is a part of the German standard army ration. The court's decision and the arguments which preceded it point to the difficulties encountered by the British Government whenever it has attempted to control the exports from neutral countries to Germany. This fruit was released because it was consigned to Sweden's Victualing Commission, which, the court said, was striving to prevent the exportation of products so received. But the sale of other similar cargoes to Germany was not ignored in the decision, and it is expected that this fruit, if retained in Sweden, will take the place there of a similar quantity which will be sent to Hamburg from the warehouses where it is stored.

Great Britain cannot interfere with Sweden's German trade, which is mainly in territorial waters. The British Government has been obliged to make concessions. It relies upon Sweden for the safe passage of its goods and envoys to Russia, and it needs the Swedish high-grade iron ore, the annual sales of which to Germany have been 1,500,000 tons, or nearly one-quarter of the quantity required for that country's shells and guns. For similar reasons there have been concessions in agreements with other neutrals. Great Britain for a long time has imported food from the adjoining continent. She is not self-supporting in many necessaries and essentials. And so the neutral countries' dairy products, vegetables, meat, cattle, fish, ore, copper, nickel, and timber have been going to Germany, and this trade has been related to exports which Great Britain has received and could not afford to lose. Agreements concerning this trade have been broken, but Great Britain's own wants prevented effective protest and punishment.

We are not dependent upon these neutrals for supplies, and now, when they plead for exports of wheat, corn, and oilcake, our Government can apply the pressure which will cut down and possibly suppress this trade with our enemy. Germany sees that we have power to do this. Herr ERZBERGER, head of the Catholic Party in the Reichstag, according to trustworthy reports, recently predicted at a committee session that Germany would soon be deprived of supplies from neutrals by our export policy. "The terrible fact had to be faced that the military authorities in their estimates had relied upon these supplies, and that nobody in authority could now say how the gap would be filled." Great Britain expects that we will do what she has been prevented from doing. We can, and should, withhold grain and fodder from these neutrals. It may be true that such imports are needed now for their own people. But hardship on account of food shortage will be a just penalty for their greed, and we could not be sure that exports intended for home consumption would not go to Germany. Their exporters are robbing the people now; probably they would continue to rob them. As for wheat, we have not enough for our allies; and any surplus of fodder grain should be used for our friends. No American product which can help Germany, even indirectly, should be sent to those whose aid to her has prolonged the war and even now is supporting armed men who will attack our soldiers.

THE UNIFORM IS FOR SOLDIERS.

The action taken under the authority of the United States Government to prevent the wearing of the uniform of our soldiers by any persons not connected with the military service is prudent and it has probably been too long deferred. No civilian should be permitted to wear a uniform similar to that of the soldier. Without the regulation buttons and insignia, such a costume would not deceive an army man, of course, and it might be worn without intent to deceive anybody. But actual intent to deceive should not be considered in the enforcement of this wise rule. There are doubtless some well-meaning men of patriotic instincts who have been misled into wearing uniforms similar to those of the regular army and National Guard. By nearly every civilian who sees them, they are taken for members of the military service. That amounts to deception. Nobody is permitted to impersonate a policeman or a fireman. To impersonate a soldier is surely as bad. That the uniform has been worn lately with the intent to deceive is a matter of record. Its employment as a commercial advertisement is shameful, and it is no wonder that the soldiers protest.

We are raising an army of 2,000,000 men. It will have use for all the army cloth that can be manufactured. The soldier's uniform is the token of his service. Civilians should not wear it on any pretext.

"THE BUREAUCRATIC INKPOT."

The approval of the German Chancellor's speech by the Hungarian Premier, Count ESTERHAZY, in an address to the Hungarian Parliament, must be deeply appreciated by the German friends of internal reform. Count ESTERHAZY, so much more "liberal" than the irreconcilable reactionary TISZA—who likewise lauds the speech—whom he succeeded, has been an advocate of "Magyarization," which depends upon Germany for success, ever since he was a freshman Deputy. The fervor of his passion for democracy may be judged from his first utterance after taking office:

> I desire to work on democratic lines, but naturally democracy in Hungary can only be a Magyar democracy.

That is, the Magyar minority, controlled by the Magyar oligarchy, must continue to rule in Hungary. Such a "reformer" must be sympathetic to Dr. MICHAELIS. "We are waging this war," the Premier said, "as a defensive war, and our goal at the conclusion of peace will not be "conquest." The official German-Austro-Hungarian theory. Count ESTERHAZY used almost the same words a week before Dr. MICHAELIS'S speech. It was in self-defense, of course, against the gigantic encroachments of Serbia that Austria began the war. Count CZERNIN'S ingenious theory of "peace without annexations or indemnities" from Russia was brilliantly interpreted by official "public opinion" as not including the restoration of Serbia or the return of the Montenegrin mountain fortress of Lovchen, commanding Cettinje and Cattaro. Various other Austrian "peace aims," an autonomous Albania dependent on Austria-Hungary, control of navigation in the Danube, a Balkan customs union, were seriously asserted last month.

Stop-gap changes in the Governments of Austria and Hungary mean no more than they mean in Germany. In spite of serious troubles and demands of long-oppressed nationalities in Hungary and Austria, there is no evidence that the ruling classes of either State contemplate other than a German peace. The divorce of words and realities which Austrian critics long ago worked as a characteristic of the Hapsburg Monarchy has seldom been more grotesque than in the statement of Dr. VON SEYDLER, the Austrian Premier, the other day, that the Reichsrat would strive for "the aim for which Austria is fighting, the unassailable, sacred right "of her peoples to decide for "themselves their internal destiny." Czechs, Poles, Croatians, Ruthenians, among the Deputies, must have felt that the force of official impudence could no further go. A Polish member of the Reichsrat, Mr. DASZYNSKI, told not long ago of the time "when "gallows and murder made their entrance into Galicia. Some speak of "30,000 executions; others say there "were twice that number. They "hanged people without in the least "knowing why." A Czech Deputy, Mr. STRIBRNY, told of the persecution of Czechs interned on suspicion. A detachment of Magyar militia murdered forty-three persons. Prisoners were beaten and tortured. In Talerhof 1,500 died of an epidemic. Men, women, and girls, huddled together, had to sleep in the open. One thinks of Turks rather than of men fighting for the unassailable sacred right of peoples to decide for themselves their internal destiny.

In official Austrian or Hungarian talk, this sharp contrast between phrases and facts must be kept in mind. What a young Czech Deputy, Dr. STRUNSKY, said of the young Emperor's pretty vaguenesses at the opening of the Reichsrat, applies to all the fine, insincere, empty asseverations of Austrian and Hungarian officialdom:

The description fits the speech of Dr. MICHAELIS also. The honest German reformers are getting bolder and bolder in their criticisms of it.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Training and Visiting Incompatible.

It is with the best of intentions, of course, that the mothers, wives, and actual or potential sweethearts of the young men who are learning at Plattsburg the arts of war go there as interested and affectionate visitors with considerable frequency and make stays there of considerable length. Both their interest and their affection are highly commendable, but if they would give a little thought to the purpose for which the young men are in camp, these estimable ladies would see that, underlying the warmth of the welcomes they receive and the courtesies extended to them, is a feeling on the part of the chief officers and of the more earnest members of the Reserve Corps that even these most loved of all visitors should not come.

For the men it is almost impossible even to hint the existence of this feeling, but that only makes it the more necessary to perform the unpleasant task for them. The work doing at Plattsburg, if well done, is nothing less than an earnest effort to obtain in a few months as much as possible of the military training given at West Point in almost as many years. A reasonable degree of success in this can be achieved only when all the time not required for rest, and all the energy possessed by the men, are devoted to the lessoning of body and mind. For the activities called social they have no leisure whatever, and they can make or take it only to the detriment of their preparation for service in the field.

What that detriment means can and should be realized best of all by those who care most for them. The lives of these young men, as well as the lives of the men whom they are to command, will depend in no small measure upon the extent to which they profit from the teaching now given. The more competent they are, the more they know, the better will be the chances in battle for themselves and for their subordinates, and—to offer a still stronger, though less personal, argument against the diversion of their attention from their present work—the better will they be able to protect their country from the perils that menace it and the more effectually will they contribute to the success of its causes.

In short, the training camp is no place for visitors and they should keep away.

Disease as Enemy of Soldiers.

In neither House nor Senate has there been manifested, as yet, full appreciation of the importance that lies in providing for our new armies the number of well-trained medical officers requisite to assure them the protection so freely and eagerly offered by modern science. A bill which, if passed, would do this to some extent has, indeed, been introduced by Senator OWEN—it was erroneously credited to Senator GORE in remarks on the subject recently made in this column—but it has not attracted the attention it deserves, and there is some reason for fearing, not that all the terrible experiences of the Spanish war camps are to be duplicated, but that the reforms and improvements will not be carried as far as they should be.

For the advance to be fully up to "the present state of the art," it is necessary that the question be most carefully considered, and that the advice of the real experts be asked and heeded. This would not decrease military efficiency in the slightest degree, though too often there is an inclination on the part of the older line officers to resent and resist what they call and honestly think the impertinent meddling of the army surgeon with the placing and managing of camps. On the contrary, the fighting power of an army is largely dependent on the health of the soldiers, and the preservation of health is almost as essential to the winning of campaigns as is courage.

Indeed, the competent medical officer in an army of today is at least as much a sanitarian as a surgeon, and it is no less his duty to keep disease out of the regiments than it is to care for the men when they are sick or wounded. Prevention rather than cure is his first task, and it is his ability to protect the soldiers from the infections to be feared as a result of the abnormal conditions of military service that distinguishes—or should distinguish—him from the civilian physician.

It is well, therefore, that the men should think of him, and speak to him, not as "Doc," but as General, Colonel, Major, Captain, or Lieutenant, as his rank in the Medical Corps may be. Thus only can he get obedience to his orders and enforce discipline. The Owen plan would give seven medical officers for each thousand soldiers. That is better than four or five, but ten would be better still, and would save both lives and money.

Instruction in This Misfortune.

Among the most interesting of yesterday's dispatches was a brief one from Berlin stating that a British submarine had been sunk by a German boat of the same sort. No details as to the nature of the encounter were given, so we do not know, as yet, whether the two boats had their fight in what may be called their own domain, or whether, abandoning for once the supposed safety of submersion at the approach of an armed enemy, they both remained on the surface and used their guns on each other in open battle.

It is of the utmost importance that this uncertainty should be cleared up if possible, and that all obtainable details of the novel combat be secured. The general assumption, hitherto, has been that submarines could not be fought with submarines, and the world has learned only too well that their destruction in any other way is slow, difficult, and terribly expensive. But if it be true—not everything coming from Berlin can be accepted at face value—that there has been such a combat, and not a mere accidental collision ending fortunately for the German boat, then the old assumption was wrong.

Whatever a German submarine has done can be done by those of Great Britain, France, and the United States. The difficulties of pursuit under water are enormous, but perhaps they are not insuperable. The bigger fish have all overcome them, and so have not a few of the diving birds. Man ought to do as well in time—and he cannot be too quick in his successful emulation of his humble neighbors.

Aliens In Our Armies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There are many men not yet citizens of the United States who, through their residence in America, have formed new affiliations and have lost the touch of the old ones, who want to do something to show a lively appreciation of the benefits of living in America.

In the cases where such men are over the military age set for enlisted men, they are denied the right by law or departmental regulations to hold commissions and are also denied the right to enlist because of the age limit. Many such men, while being ready to become citizens, put off the matter from day to day, since August, 1914, because they did not want to look like quitters by turning their backs on their countries while their countries were at war. After the United States declared war, many of these men then filed first papers with the ultimate view of becoming citizens and with the immediate view of having their services accepted by this Government. As a matter of course, they may be advised in cold blood to pull up stakes and join their own country's forces, but sometimes such men find themselves strangers in their own countries. Anyhow, it may seem to them more agreeable to enter the conflict side by side with their new-found friends in a new country which they have learned to love.

Patriotic Sparrows.

This morning, in unfastening a shutter at my home, I was pleased and amused at seeing behind the shutter our colors interwoven conspicuously in a sparrow's nest. Shame to the slackers when even the birds take to patriotism!

MEETING THE DRAFT.

They Will Be Proud and Happy Who Answer in Washington's Words.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The draft will be received with varying emotions by those who are fortunate enough to be called into the service of the nation. Some will go gladly, some reluctantly. They will be the happy ones who go like Washington, saying, "I am ready."

It is a proud privilege to be among those chosen ones. In after years they will say with just pride, "I responded to the call of my country." Their descendants, for generations to come, will acclaim them, saying, "He fought in France!" That is enough; it tells the story. Or they may say, "He fought in the great war for the liberty of the world, for the real freedom of the seas, and to make secure the blessings of peace, with honor, which we inherit!"

Their names will remain on the roll of honor for all time. They and their comrades in the military service of the nation will be among the real Americans, no matter from what race or nation they may have sprung.

What a great inheritance have those Americans whose ancestors crossed the ocean in their little ships, amid dangers infinitely greater than now, to found a new civilization in a wilderness, among savage men. And those others whose "patent of nobility" lies in the fact that their ancestors fought at Lexington, at Bunker Hill, or at Yorktown, or were of that band of heroes who endured, under Washington's leadership, the hardships of Valley Forge, or of those who in yet later years fought at Gettysburg.

Many a man can say today with pride, I was with Leonard Wood, or Theodore Roosevelt in Cuba, or with Dewey at Manila! Those who can say it hold their heads a little higher and step out a little firmer, and are respected a great deal more than those who cannot.

When the boys come home, as most of them will, better, stronger, nobler men in every way, they will lift the nation to new and higher standards of life and government and confer immeasurable benefits upon the world, for they will establish liberty.

Who would not be glad to serve in such a cause? The cause of freedom and peace. Our own country's cause! We did not seek the war. We did everything we could to avoid it. It was forced on us by Germany. Our country was infested with spies and plotters, our ships sunk at sea, our people killed, our territory actually bartered to induce Mexico to attack us; we had no alternative but to submit or fight.

If there ever was a just war, a war for freedom, a war that would claim the best that is in us, the utmost we can give or do, this is it!

We all may well say, "All that I have and am I freely give in this cause." To you—parents and sons alike—who would seek "exemption," take new thought. Don't do it! Don't for your own sake. Don't for the sake of those you love. Don't for the sake of those who come after you. Don't let your neighbors and associates now say, or your descendants after you, "He sneaked out of the draft."

If a man is not able to go, let him count it a great misfortune. He is the one to whom sympathy is due. He will spend the rest of his life explaining "why." Above all, don't shrivel your soul, don't lower your whole life by cowardly reluctance. Timid parents, brace up! Your son is not in half so much danger in war as an honorable soldier as he is in peace as a dishonorable coward. Americans are not cowards; don't think you will have any comfort in any kind of cowardly avoidance of duty.

Therefore, for every reason, for honor, for duty, for safety, and, before God, because it is right, "Go and Give."

Know the calm happiness and joy of sacrifice. Know the peace that comes with it. Know the joy of service. Then throw your whole hearts into the cause and let no one even shake your confidence in the conviction that you have done just right. Stand by the Government. Be ready to serve. Be proud and glad to be called. Rejoice if you or your son "has drawn the lucky number."

Send the boys out with courage and they will come back with honor!

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to the statement made by one of the heads of the Standard Oil Company in your issue of even date in re the waste of gasoline: I am an automobile owner and would be delighted to do my bit in this respect also, providing no shirkers or slackers profited by my sacrifice. Would it not be fair to all, and easily enforced, if the Government would issue gasoline cards entitling automobile owners to a given number of gallons a month a car? I decline, however, to deprive myself and my family of the pleasures they get from motoring, when no real effort is made to check waste by the authorities.

Magistrate Marsh's Reappointment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Mayor has done himself credit by reappointing Magistrate Norman J. Marsh, in defiance of the usual considerations, to a full term of ten years. It is a hopeful sign that the eminent judicial qualities of that excellent Magistrate have been of themselves sufficient to overcome the special appeals for the numberless aspirants for a much desired but not too often acceptably filled office.

New York, July 20, 1917. LAWYER.

ON THE TURNING UP OF THE KAISER'S SKULL.

(By a Hamlet of the Twenty-first Century.)

Within this clod flared hell!
Through this shard kingdoms fell
And toppled thrones—this thing
Of mold about which cling
Unwholesome damps!
And yet
No pity ever came,
No smoldering regret,
No twinge of human shame
For what it shed of blood,
For what it razed by flame.
And now—a mud-caked grin!
What furies ruled within?
What demons, mad with lust,
Who spurred it on?
Vile dust,
Lie there! Your swords are rust,
Your gases, planes, and guns,
Your mighty war machines,
Your regiments of Huns,
Your skulking submarines
Are gone; for all were hurled
To Time's profound abyss
When Death's last flag was furled.

Half truths loomed big to you.
To crush, you planned, to strew
The earth with doom until
All bowed before your will.
God said it should not be;
He knew your blasphemy,
Your sin, your vandal dreams.
To man came back the gleams
Of lost divinity
That guided him of old.
He rose up fearlessly
And smote your devil's hold.
You deemed God but a tool
To work your heat.
Fear fool!

MR. PENROSE'S DISPATCH.

Central News Denies Filing It, but Senator Replies He Has It.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE NEW YORK TIMES issue of July 25 considerable prominence was given to a statement, made on the floor of the United States Senate by Senator Penrose, that the manager of the Central News, Ltd., of London and New York started a story on the transatlantic cables a few nights ago, and further states that the censor in the cable office in New York strongly objected and demanded information as to how the Central News, Ltd., got the story.

We beg to inform you that the censor in the cable office never objected to the story because it was never filed, as we can find no record in our office, either in New York or in Washington, and have no information of any kind whatever as to the filing of this message.

Will you be kind enough to correct the statement as made in your paper, and oblige,

EDWARD RASCOVAR,
President Central News of America.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Senator Penrose said tonight that he had seen the Central News dispatch to which he referred in his speech of yesterday, and that there is no doubt as to the correctness of his statement concerning it. The Senator has the dispatch at his office at the Capitol, he said, and would be glad to show it to THE TIMES tomorrow.

"In the meantime," he said, "you may say that I am sure of my facts. Such a dispatch was sent and I am able to produce the proof of it."

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Complete plans for the reorganization of the advisory branches of the Council of National Defense and for the selection of a war industries committee, or central purchasing body, are now in the hands of the President. It is expected that a formal announcement regarding them will come from the White House tomorrow after a meeting of the council.

It is understood on the highest authority that Frank A. Scott of the Warner-Swazey Company, Cleveland, Ohio, Chairman of the General Munitions Board, has been recommended to President Wilson by the council as the man who should head the purchasing committee. The President, it is said, has the highest regard for Mr. Scott and is prepared to place the important duties in his hands.

Bernard M. Baruch of New York and Julius Rosenwald, who head committees which have been investigating prices of raw and finished materials, will also be on the committee, it is said, along with a representative of the War Department and a representative of the navy and two civilians not at present connected with the Council of National Defense.

It is understood also that the reorganization, or as some have termed it, the readjustment of the advisory bodies of the council, will in no way eliminate men valuable to the Administration but will be directed toward bringing them into closer co-ordination where their services may be of the greatest value.

There has been much discussion concerning the advisability of placing Howard E. Coffin, Chairman of the Aircraft Production Board, on the Central Committee. Mr. Coffin has the full confidence of the President, and the question involved was whether he would have time to perform other duties in connection with the great task ahead of him in working for the development of the airplane program. It was said tonight that this was one of the points still undecided.

BRING A BIG FRENCH GUN.

Major Reiffe of the French Field Artillery, accompanied by five Captains and a lieutenant of the same branch of the service, arrived yesterday at an Atlantic port. The French officers will be attached to the United States Army as instructors. They brought with them in the hold of the ship a 350-millimeter gun, which has already seen service in the defense of Verdun, and is known in this country as the French 12½-inch field gun. It has a range of twenty miles and scatters nearly a ton of metal every time it is discharged.

The officers were met on their arrival by artillery officers of the United States Army, who informed them that quarters had been prepared for them at Sandy Hook, where the demonstration of the big gun's capabilities will take place.

Major Reiffe said that he was under the orders of the War Department at Washington and could not give out any details regarding the gun he had brought over.

BRENT OUT OF SHIP BOARD.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Edward N. Hurley, selected by President Wilson to head the United States Shipping Board, took the oath of office at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, and, with a smile, announced that he was ready to build ships. He wouldn't talk about his plans or discuss the question of wood versus steel. Instead he hurried to the offices of the Shipping Board, where he held a long conference with William Denman, the former Chairman, and Rear Admiral Capps, who has been named to succeed Major Gen. Goethals as General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, which will build the ships for the Government.

There will be a meeting of the Shipping Board tomorrow morning, at which Mr. Hurley will be formally elected Chairman. As soon as that is done, Admiral Capps will be "hired" by the Board of Directors of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. With the formalities out of the way, they will get to work.

The resignation of Theodore Brent, close friend of Mr. Denman, as a member of the Shipping Board, was accepted today by President Wilson, but there was no intimation as to the identity of his successor.

Mr. Hurley was full of enthusiasm today, and let it be known that it was his intention to put into the shipbuilding program every ounce of energy and ability he possessed. He is sure that from this time things will move without a hitch. He has the highest regard for Admiral Capps, and there is every indication that they will work together without friction.

The scenes at the offices of the Shipping Board today were cheering ones which spoke for concentration of effort. Everybody was busy and everybody was talking about building ships, and not about controversies.

The only thing approaching a hitch was the fact that the Senate had not confirmed the nomination of Bainbridge Colby as a member of the Shipping Board, but it is believed that this action will soon be taken.

Exporting Firm Sells Ships.

The exporting firm of Gaston, Williams & Wigmore has sold two ships now under construction by the Great Lakes Engineering Corporation of 5,600 tons dead weight each to a private corporation. The ships will be finished within a few weeks. In place of these vessels the firm will place orders soon, according to information obtained yesterday, for two others of 10,000 tons each. The new ships, to be delivered late next year, are to be used in the North Atlantic trade.

CHARGE ESPIONAGE OF CONGRESS MAIL

BURLESON ENTERS DENIAL

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Charges that some one connected with the postal service had repeatedly tampered with their mail were made before the House Committee on Expenditures in the Post Office Department today by two Massachusetts members of the House, Representative Peter Tague, Democrat, and Representative Frederick Dallinger, Republican, brought the accusations against the department.

The charges were a sequel to those recently made before the committee by Thomas F. Flaherty, Secretary of the Association of Postal Employes, who alleged that the Post Office Department had sent inspectors into the district of a member of Congress to "get something on him." Mr. Tague said today that he was advised that he had been trailed by the post office inspectors or detectives. It was indirectly and inferentially alleged that this had occurred because Mr. Tague had opposed legislation wanted by the department—particularly that for the abolition of pneumatic mail tube service in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and other cities.

Chairman Keating of the House Committee read a letter today from Postmaster General Burleson referring to the Flaherty charges as coming from "a discharged employe," and saying that ordinarily the Post Office Department took no notice of such matters. However, Mr. Burleson denied the various allegations and offered to send the records of the department to the committee.

Mr. Tague said that recently a number of letters both to and from him had been opened and resealed before delivery. He also testified that he had been informed that Post Office inspectors were trying "to get something on me." One of his informants, he said, was Michael O'Leary, Democratic State Chairman for Massachusetts.

Mr. Tague said that up to the time he had taken issue with the department on the pneumatic tube matter his mail had never been tampered with, but there were numerous instances of tampering more recently.

Mr. Tague said the tampering was confined largely to letters going to Boston and containing his frank. Representative Tague exhibited a letter mailed by him on June 9 which had been received at the Scituate Post Office in opened condition. The Scituate Post Office had affixed the customary notice attached to letters received in bad order. Mr. Tague's clerk testified the letter when mailed here was in good condition and well sealed.

Representative Tague said even special delivery letters had been opened in transit. He had been aware of the tampering, he said, for some time, but had said nothing about it because of a desire to locate the responsible parties.

Dallinger Makes Similar Charges.

Similar testimony was offered by Representative Dallinger. He said he had engaged in a controversy with Postmaster Murray of Boston over the alleged bad service given the Cambridge station. He wrote an account of this controversy to a newspaper friend, he said, and the letter was never delivered. A second letter, registered, was received after having been opened in transit.

"As a member of Congress," said Mr. Dallinger, "I believe that my mail has been tampered with, and I would no more think of sending a confidential letter to my district which could be identified than I would cut off my hand."

The registered letter, said Mr. Dallinger, had been clumsily resealed with tissue paper and delivered after a delay of a day or two.

Mr. Flaherty said today that he severed his connection with the San Francisco Post Office soon after being elected Secretary of the Postal Association. The department, he said, instead of granting the customary leave of absence to an employe so elected, had taken exception to his activities.

Representative Tague said that in his conversation with Mr. O'Leary, the latter had told him that Post Office Inspectors were investigating him. O'Leary was quoted as saying that he had been visited by one of these inspectors, whom he had advised that "You are investigating the wrong man. Tague's record is unassailable."

Postmaster General's Letter.

Since I have been Postmaster General it has been the rule to give no attention to statements made by discharged postal employes or irresponsible persons. I have read that a charge was made yesterday before your committee by a discharged postal employe that inspectors have, by my direction, been sent into the districts of members of the House who voted against certain legislation urged by the department for the express purpose of "getting something" on the member which would be of future service to the department.

Of course, this charge is without the shadow of truth upon which to rest, and whereas your committee is without jurisdiction to deal with such matters, I feel that in justice to the members of Congress and the inspection service that it should be not only promptly denied, but, inasmuch as your committee has allowed the false statement to be made, you should not rest content with permitting the name of the injured member to be imparted in confidence, but the whole matter should be fully exposed, so that its falsity can be at once established. There is a record in the department of every investigation made by the inspectors, which includes those ordered by me, as well as those originating from other sources, and this record is open to you as a member of Congress.

The committee has not fixed a date for another hearing.

WOMEN'S WAR WORK CENTRE

It was voted yesterday at a conference called by Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve of Barnard College, under the auspices of the Executive Committee of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense, at the Women's University Club, 106 East Fifty-second Street, to establish a clearing house in this city for the training of women for war service. Representatives of different educational institutions were present. Colum

MAY UNITE FORCES FOR FRENCH RELIEF

PLANS OF INDEPENDENTS

Robert S. Lovett, Chairman of the Red Cross Committee on Co-operation, announced yesterday that the committee had about reached an agreement with the American Fund for French Wounded to centralize the distribution of relief supplies in France. The fund, of which Miss Anne Morgan is Treasurer, has 500 collecting committees in the United States, and operates fourteen supply motors and furnishes supplies to 3,000 hospitals in France. It is the first of the independent organizations in the Federal Council of Allied War Relief Charities to treat individually with the Red Cross following its failure to arrange a general peace with the council on Wednesday. The Surgical Dressings Committee, another of the independents, that had been furnishing surgical and medical appliances to the hospitals of Europe, has also affiliated with the Red Cross, but did so before the Wednesday meeting.

Judge Lovett would not disclose the basis of the contemplated agreement with the American Fund for French Wounded, but it was learned from another source that it sought to permit the fund to retain its identity by permitting it to continue its distribution service under the general direction of the Red Cross. Any agreement made by the Red Cross Co-operation Committee with any independent organization must be ratified by the War Council, of which Henry P. Davison is the head, and it will probably be a day or two therefore before a definite statement of the outcome of the negotiations can be made.

John Moffat, Executive Secretary of the Federal Council, again asserted yesterday that the opposition in some quarters that the Red Cross had broken off negotiations with the council was unfounded. The council, Mr. Moffat said, would continue to treat with the Red Cross as long as there was any possibility of establishing a co-operative basis of agreement, but he asserted that it was a mistake to suppose that the seventy or more relief organizations identified with the council were solely dependent on the Red Cross for means of transporting supplies to Europe. The members of the council met yesterday to discuss the outcome of the meeting in Judge Lovett's office on Wednesday, and following adjournment, Mr. Moffat said:

"The Red Cross at Wednesday's conference pointed out that it was quite practicable for the allied charities to make their own arrangements for shipping goods to Europe, and it is possible that some such arrangement may be carried out."

Mr. Moffat did not say what assurance he had that cargo space to care for independent shipments would be available, but intimated that there were enough vessels under the various organizations represented by him to make such an arrangement possible.

"We heartily agree with the Red Cross that centralization of effort is desirable," he said, "so that in many instances a greater efficiency can be secured through such instrumentality as the Red Cross shall devise. Our only fear—absolutely the only point at issue—is the matter of distribution of supplies collected in this country for specific purposes. At our last meeting with the American Red Cross, Judge Lovett laid before us a plan of affiliation which left to us our autonomy, our separate identities in this country, and it was very satisfactory in that respect to me.

"The situation was that the American Red Cross insisted on absolutely controlling distribution in Europe, and upon the right to distribute supplies to other objects than those for which they were specifically given, or for which money was specifically given. In the interests of efficiency it is possible that such an arrangement is wise, but, unfortunately, it would probably be illegal to divert goods in this manner, and the effect upon the givers of money and supplies would be bad. Collections in this country for relief would be made extremely difficult—we fear in many cases might be rendered impossible."

Mr. Moffat added illustrations of his argument that whereas American women might exert every effort to furnish relief supplies for American troops, they might object if what they sent were diverted to the relief of Armenians, Syrians, and Russians. Similarly, he said, with the Italians, who might object to a deflection of their goods to the Greeks, and with the British, who would not like to have supplies intended for their own kin sent to ameliorate conditions in Serbia.

Mr. Moffat asserted that far from having been eliminated from the situation the Federal Council was as active as ever, and would pass on the agreements made by the Red Cross with the independents as individuals for the council, he said, favored audited financial statements by all charity organizations and expected to become a permanent organization, retaining most of its affiliated societies.

Judge Lovett, when Mr. Moffat's statement was shown to him, said that the only comment he had to make was that the statement as to the attitude of the Red Cross toward gifts made for special objects "might be misleading, although Mr. Moffat didn't so intend it."

"The Red Cross has, I think, as much regard for trust obligations as anybody," said Judge Lovett, "it would not think of diverting gifts from a specified object without the consent of the giver. Its position is that under the existing difficulties of ocean transportation, the congestion in the shipping and conditions of rail transportation in France, the Red Cross itself will not assume the burden of transporting and delivering articles consigned to any particular destination. Many articles, comparatively unimportant, have been sent in the past, but the present extraordinary difficulties of shipping makes a continuation of this impossible.

"All available space is required for foodstuffs, medical and hospital supplies, munitions, &c. It is quite possible that the Red Cross will be able when shipping conditions improve, to undertake the transportation of gifts to particular destinations, and when that time comes, announcement will be made, and the articles it will undertake to deliver will be enumerated.

Many Made by High School Pupils to be Used in the Service.

Red Cross and thrift posters made by high school pupils of the city under the auspices of the School Art League are being exhibited at the Knoedler Galleries. Sixty were chosen from several hundred made for a prize contest conducted by the league under the auspices of Dr. James P. Haney, Director of Art in the city high schools. Many of the posters will be used in the service, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, the Red Cross, and the School Garden Association having made selections from them for their own use.

The posters may be obtained for use at a nominal cost by applying to the Secretary of the School Art League, 215 West Fifty-seventh Street, Manhattan. The group of posters will be exhibited in other cities, going first to Washington, D. C., upon invitation of Mr. Hoover's publicity department.

RULES OF CABLE CENSORS.

Western Union Announces Regulations for Outgoing Messages.

In announcing the censorship of outgoing cable messages, which took effect at midnight on Wednesday, the Western Union Telegraph Company made public last night the following regulations:

Cablegrams to all transatlantic points may be written in English or French. To Italy and Italian territory, Italian may be used. Cablegrams to Central and South America, to the West Indies, Mexico, and to points reached by the Pacific cables may be written in plain English, French, or Spanish.

The following authorized codes may be used, conditioned on their acceptability under the censorship regulations in effect in the foreign countries concerned. The name of the code shall be written in the check and will be signaled free: A. B. C. 5th, Scott's 10th Edition, Western Union, (not including five-letter edition,) Lieber's, (not including five-letter edition,) Bentley's Complete Phrase Code, (not including the Oil and Mining Supplements,) Broomhall's Imperial Combination Code, Broomhall's Imperial Combination Code, Rubber Edition, Meyer's Atlantic Cotton Code, 39th Edition; Riverside Code, 5th Edition, and A. Z.

Addresses must be complete, but properly registered code addresses may be used, where permitted by the censorship abroad. The sender must place the full name and address of the addressee on the face of the message and likewise his full name and address. In the case of code addresses which are permitted by the censorship abroad the above information will not be transmitted, but is for the use of the censor solely.

Cablegrams without text or with only single word text will not be passed. Single code words will be accepted when they translate into two or more words which are clear to the censor.

All cablegrams must be signed; in the case of individuals by the surname at least; in the case of a firm or organization, by the name of the firm or organization, or at least by the surname of a responsible member of the firm or officer of the organization when satisfactory information regarding him is on file with the censor. Code addresses as signatures are not permitted.

If the message refers to a shipment or to a voyage the name of the vessel concerned must appear on the message, but will not be considered a part of the cablegram.

Coded cablegrams filed directly at cable offices where a cable censor is stationed should be accompanied by a translation, and if it is certified by some responsible member of a firm it will tend to expedite the transmission of the message.

Test words are permitted when senders comply with regulations which will be furnished on application to the censor or telegraph and cable companies.

Serial numbering to the West Indies, Central and South America, Mexico, and Pacific points will be permitted by numbering from 1 to 999, but the serial number must begin with No. 1 on the first day of each month. At option of the sender, two additional figures may be added to serial number, indicating the day of the month, and these figures may be in plain figures or in authorized code translating into figures, but on the first nine days of the month the number shall be preceded by a zero. The serial number, when used, shall be the last word in the message preceding the signature. Nothing herein requires any cablegram to have a serial number. The rules re serial numbering and test words do not as yet apply to transatlantic traffic, as censorship authorities abroad have not yet agreed to the arrangement. Serial numbers and test words therefore should not, for the present, be used in transatlantic traffic.

The regulations conclude by listing the following information as prohibited: Military information, aid to enemy, numbering cablegrams, except as specified, information of movements of all vessels to submarine zone, private codes, and serial numbers, except as specified.

ASSAILS PICKETS' JAILERS.

Mrs. John Winters Brannan, wife of the President of the Board of Trustees of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, who has just reached her home in New York, at 125 East Fifty-seventh Street, following a short term of service at the workhouse at Occoquan after her arrest as a suffrage picket in Washington, told of her experiences yesterday.

"We were taken to the Occoquan workhouse in a car marked 'Whites only,'" Mrs. Brannan said, "but when we reached the place we found that we were quartered in a dormitory with the colored women, and their beds were close to ours. We would not have complained of their presence except for its significance. We sang with them, worked with them and talked with them, and nothing could exceed their kindness to us. They were anxious to do anything they could for us, and they were indignant when they heard that we had been sentenced for sixty days for a first offense, when they, who had been there before ten or a dozen times, had ten, twenty-five, or thirty days. They did not do or say anything that was objectionable while we were there.

"Every one knows that it is the small necessities of life which women in our position would feel the loss of most. We were not allowed combs, toothbrushes, or even handkerchiefs. We were told we must even remove our wedding rings. 'I can't take mine off,' I said. 'It has not been off for thirty years, you would have to file it.' 'We will see about that in the morning,' said a keeper.

"Then we noticed that our colored companions had their hands covered with gay rings, they had combs that they wore in their hair, and one of the women had a toothbrush in a pocket of her dress.

"I think this will open the eyes of many people. I talked with Senator Colt of Rhode Island about our treatment and with Senator Newlands, who was an old friend of my father, and they were both shocked. We have all been inundated with letters, and the President must have been flooded with letters and telegrams which caused him to pardon us."

CAPTAIN RAIMONDO WEDS MISS TINEDO

CEREMONY AT BILTMORE

Bride Is a Daughter of the Late Gen. Velasco, Once a Candidate for President of Venezuela.

A romance which began during the recent visit of the Italian Mission to this city culminated last evening in the marriage at the Hotel Biltmore of Miss Ana Louisa Tinedo of this city, formerly of Maracaibo, Venezuela, and Captain Sebastiano Raimondo of Genoa, Italy, a director of shipbuilding of international reputation.

Captain Raimondo was a member of the committee appointed by Mayor Mitchel for the reception of the mission, headed by Prince Udine, and it was during one of the social gatherings in honor of the royal visitors that he first met his bride.

Mrs. Raimondo has become popular in society on the west side of town since coming to New York, and is a daughter of the late General Bernardo Tinedo Velasco, who was once a candidate for the Presidency of Venezuela, having held several high civic and military positions in the South American republic.

The wedding ceremony at the Biltmore was performed by Supreme Court Justice Charles L. Guy. The bride wore a gown of white satin, with a veil of rare Spanish lace, an heirloom in her family.

Later the couple left on an extended honeymoon, and as they first met and were married in this country, they have planned to "see America first." On their return they will reside at Kew Gardens, L. I.

Captain Raimondo holds a commission in the Italian Army, and came here about a year ago to take charge of the purchasing and shipping interests of Gio Ansaldo & Co. of Genoa, the largest munitions and engineering construction concern in Italy. Before coming to this side he was in charge of the building of warships for the Italian Navy.

FRIARS GET FREEPORT KEY.

The Friars left their monastery in West Forty-eighth Street yesterday and journeyed to Long Island for a field day and clambake, as is their custom. The pilgrimage was made in motor-buses and cars, and the destination was Freeport, the home of Frank Tinney and other stage celebrities. Freeport was chosen because The Lights, a theatrical organization of long fame, who live in the vicinity, have a clubhouse there, and they invited the Friars to make it their rendezvous for the event. The hospitality of The Lights was not carried to excess, however, for in the baseball game between the two clubs that followed the presentation of a key to the city to Raymond Hitchcock the hosts trimmed their guests by the score of 1 to 0. The game was suspended in the fifth inning to permit the players to partake of refreshments, which were needed badly on account of the heat, and was not resumed.

Jack Gleason and his trusty megaphone kept the thirty motor loads of Thespians in action throughout the day. The first stop en route was made at Lynbrook, where a light luncheon was served at Blossom Heath Inn. After the field contests there was a clambake, and then those who had not straggled back to the city to take part in the evening performances returned in a body and finished the celebration at the clubhouse.

AGREE WITH MUSICIANS.

The threatened clash between the musicians and the theatre managers over the adoption of a new scale of higher wages demanded by the former was obviated yesterday by a compromise by which the wages of the musicians will be raised approximately 10 per cent. The agreement was reached at a meeting of representatives of the Managers Mutual Protective Association and of the Musicians Mutual Protective Union held at the offices of the former in the New York Theatre building. Marc Klaw, President of the managers' organization, and D. Edward Porter, President of the musicians' union, headed the two delegations.

Under the new schedules the musicians will receive the following weekly wages: Musical comedy, $33; dramatic, $26; Winter Garden, $35.25; Hippodrome, $30.75; vaudeville, $35. The last named musicians are employed for a maximum of six and one-half hours at two shows daily, and are to receive pay for overtime. The vaudeville managers also agreed not to reduce the size of their orchestras. The new schedule will become operative Aug. 1.

Why risk a loss when a NORTH AMERICA baggage policy at very little cost will pay you promptly? It insures your baggage and effects wherever they may be from the moment they leave your home until their return.

Remember your chance of loss is just as great on a day's trip as it is on a long tour.

DIVORCE FOR MRS. BARNEY.

Master in Chancery Nathan Prendergast of Jersey City recommended yesterday that Mrs. Claire Barney of Jersey City should receive a divorce from Marshall A. Barney, formerly a lawyer of New York, who is now in Honolulu "or thereabouts." Mrs. Barney is a cloak model in a Manhattan store.

The testimony in the case must be became public in 1914 when Barney sued Alexander S. Chessin, a consulting engineer and former professor in Johns Hopkins and Columbia, for $100,000, alleging alienation of his wife's affections. He charged that when Professor Chessin played sweet music to his wife she lost all thought of her husband. He also charged that Professor Chessin taught his wife improper ideals of life. In January, 1915, on the day the suit was to have been tried, Barney withdrew the action and in a public statement took back all the unkind things he had said about Professor Chessin.

According to the papers in the divorce suit, Barney shortly afterward went to Alaska and thence to Honolulu. Mrs. Barney charged that not only had he deserted her, but that he had been cruel. She said he spanked her, and one time when she was sick upbraided her for not going to bed even so he could go walking with her nurse. To show the court the attitude of her husband toward her, Mrs. Barney introduced in evidence the last letter she received from him in which he said:

"Perfidious Heart: Your cowardly mentality, your obtuse insults, your lying vituperation are not going to be left unanswered. I am going to have one last laugh at you. You have a pretty face and I love you so well that I cannot live normally without you, so hereby adopt alcohol and stick to it. With my last breath I will curse your deceitful lying heart."

There was much more such evidence which led to the decision of the Master that the Barney family should be dissolved.

Lantern slides, the property of the French Government, showing the condition of the devastated areas of northern France, recently retaken by the Allies, were shown for the first time in this country at a meeting held last night in the Fine Arts Building, 215 West Fifty-seventh Street, under the auspices of the Food Battalion of the Architectural League of New York. The most interesting of the views were those showing the remains of the orchard district, which the Germans ruthlessly destroyed in their retreat.

Many of the pictures were explained by Charles Butler, designer of one of the large hospitals in France, who had made a tour of the region. He said that the cannon had plowed up the top soil of much of the land to such an extent that it would be years before anything could be grown on it again. Mr. Butler told of the efforts of the French Government to help the peasants to rebuild their ruined homes in the very spots where their houses had stood.

Dr. John H. Finley, Commissioner of Education, in a brief address, said that the Germans displayed lack of judgment in cutting the orchards of the farms of the French peasants. He said it gave them no military advantage and earned for them the increased hatred of the French.

Several members of the league also spoke on the work which the battalion is doing on its twenty-acre farm at Forest Hills.

The Red Star Animal Relief.

And now that our human soldiers have been most liberally provided for, how about relief for our four-footed soldiers, whose humane needs should be also considered?

The Red Star Animal Relief, founded at the request of the Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker, (the Director of which is Dr. W. O. Stillman of the National Humane Association of Albany,) is appealing for $250,000 for immediate use.

Thousands and thousands of horses sent to the front will be lost to our country unless this branch of patriotic service can be made financially efficient to provide hospitals and other equipment for these dumb servitors of war.

As Chairman of the New York Branch of the Red Star, I have already received several checks, but I wish that the columns of your widely read paper would make special mention of the urgent needs of this organization. Checks may be sent to Mrs. B. K. Cutter, Treasurer, 1,058 Fifth Avenue, New York.

MEXICANS DEPLORE PRESS ATTACKS HERE

SEE CLOSE CO-OPERATION

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, July 26. — Mexicans high in authority whose sympathies are known to be with the Allies express themselves freely regarding the recent attacks upon the Mexican Government published in American papers and reprinted here in El Democrata, a German subsidized organ. They say that these attacks show clearly that German propagandist agents in the United States are working in close harmony with German agents here in the hope of forcing Mexico to break with her northern neighbor.

These officials say that Mexico has a hard road to travel, owing to the attitude of the lower classes, who in the time of Diaz were taught to remember the war of 1847 and to hate foreigners, especially Americans. Local politicians, when the peons grow restive, find the anti-American cry a very efficient means of taking the minds of the lower classes off their troubles.

The campaign waged by El Democrata only serves to stir up the illiterate masses, who follow the leader who makes the most violent speeches, which appeal to the passions of the uneducated.

"It is strange," said one official, "that these attacks have been made by a certain group of papers and only after the Mexican Government has demonstrated its friendship by its policy of benevolent neutrality toward the American Government. Apparently a determined campaign has been prepared by the Germans in the United States. Co-operation with agents here has been arranged, as these articles, written in the United States, are forwarded to the German-owned paper here and used to incite the lower classes against Americans and turn them toward the Germans.

"Taking advantage of our situation during the period of reconstruction, which makes it difficult to enforce ordinary laws, the Germans in Mexico have made every effort to force Mexico to assume an attitude of hostility to the United States. These attempts will fail, but they show not only the lack of patriotism on the part of certain newspaper owners in the United States, but their almost criminal complicity in aiding the German propaganda, which seeks to entangle the United States in order to nullify its efforts in Europe."

"A complete understanding which will establish closer relations, benefiting both countries, cannot be reached if irresponsible newspapers continually distort the true state of affairs in Mexico to further their selfish interests. Mexico will maintain her policy of benevolent neutrality toward the United States in spite of the efforts of German agents and certain section of the press of the United States.

"While we cannot allow our names to be published, owing to our official connections, you may assure the American people that we are working with all our power to make Mexico's relations with the United States closer than ever. We realize that the United States can teach many things which benefit our country, especially in agriculture, as it possesses many modern improvements which, when brought to Mexico, will develop our fields to the fullest extent, allowing Mexico to enter the ranks of cereal-exporting countries."

URGES SCOTS TO UNITE.

Committee Plans Wide Propaganda in Favor of Nationalism.

The Scottish Nationalist Committee, an organization "devoted to the cause of the independence of Scotland," announced last night through its Secretary, Marion A. Smith, the beginning of a nation-wide propaganda to interest people of Scottish ancestry living in the United States in the movement. It is hoped to perfect an active organization in every State and large city in the country to carry on the work, according to the Secretary, who is the honorary President of the International Scots Home Rule League and Vice President of the Highland Land League of Scotland.

"Our purpose," said the Secretary, "is to associate ourselves whole-heartedly with Scots in the homeland who have for their common object the reassertion of the sovereign rights of the ancient Scottish nation. It is planned to present a national protest at the International Congress to be held after the war, which will embrace the following:

"Protest against the exclusion of Scotland, which, notwithstanding any pretended act to the contrary, is now, as she ever was, a sovereign State, and, as such, has an indefeasible right to send her own representatives to any international congress.

"Protest against the pretended right of England to appear, and speak, in name, and in behalf of Scotland at any international congress."

Undertaker's Assistant Accused of Posing as Aviation Lieutenant.

A cap in which he had written "Lieutenant, United States Aviation Corps," led to the arrest yesterday of John Levens, 21 years old, of 54 Orange Street, Brooklyn. The complainant was William A. Boggs, a student in the Aviation Corps on Governors Island, who asserted that after becoming acquainted with Levens in Central Park he became suspicious of him. Levens asserted that he was a Lieutenant in the Aviation Corps, and readily accepted an invitation to accompany Boggs to the Elks Club to inspect some literature on flying and military matters.

At Forty-seventh Street and Broadway, Boggs called Policeman Patrick McDonald and had Levens arrested for impersonating an aviation officer. Levens was taken to the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station, where he explained that he was employed as undertaker's assistant at 54 Orange Street, Brooklyn; that he was married and had one child. He said that he did not mean to convey the impression that he was an officer in the Aviation Corps, and was locked up for arraignment in a Federal court today.

BRADY MAKES ROUND IN 71

Another exceptional display of golf was provided in the second day of the international team matches over the Siwanoy Country Club's links yesterday, where Westchester's army of enthusiasts elbowed each other and tried desperately to see some of the sensational shots of the day. Homebred professionals, led by Walter B. Hagan of Rochester, managed to get a big lead on the field at the expense of the English and now have a total of 80 holes to their credit, with the English second at 59 holes, the Scots third with 55, and the amateurs a poor fourth with 24.

The attraction of the day was the match between Jerome D. Travers and Jock Hutchinson, amateur and Scotch professional respectively. Hutchinson, according to experts, is playing the best game of any golfer in this country, and he had to be at the top of his ability to overcome the marvelous short game of Travers. The foremost amateur was 1 up and 2 to play on Hutchinson, but was defeated at the home green, more through the uncanny long driving of Hutchinson than anything else.

Hutchinson's efforts on the greens were hardly comparable to those of Travers, but at the long holes, which abound at Siwanoy, the Scot made up for the ground lost. He finished and won the match with two wonderful shots, which left the onlookers gasping in amazement and hardly could be believed by the professionals who were watching and who had played that eighteenth hole.

Amazing Play by Hutchinson.

With the tees moved back it was fully 565 yards from the tee to the green, yet Hutchinson was on the green, thirty feet from the cup, on his second shot. He drove more than 330 yards off the tee and carried the rest of the way over bunkers, a ditch, and to the top of a short hill on his second. He was down in 4 easily, but Travers needed the customary three shots to reach the green and was unable to sink a thirty-foot putt for a half in a stroke under par.

Travers really lost the match at the seventeenth. He drove poorly and was short on his iron shot, and needed a long approach to get on the green and then two putts. Hutchinson was on the green in 2 and down in 4 to square the match.

Although defeated, Travers was by no means disgraced. Spectators voted it one of the greatest matches ever played. Hutchinson won the first and seventh holes of the outward journey, and Travers squared matters by taking the second and fourth. They reached the turn in 39 each. Hutchinson had a 7 on the long fourth, where he found the rough off the tee, was still in trouble on his second, and was behind a tree on his third.

Fine Recovery by Travers.

Travers made a spectacular shot at the fifth to halve the hole. He was in a ditch on his second shot, but dug the ball out and lifted it to a raised green in position to get down in two putts. Hutchinson took three putts after getting on the green in 2.

Hutchinson won the tenth, then missed a putt and lost the eleventh, but won the long twelfth with the aid of another prodigious drive. The next two were halved. Travers appeared to clinch the match when he cut under par to win the fifteenth, 4–5, and again was under par at the sixteenth to win that hole, 3–4. Then came the last two holes, and Hutchinson's unbelievable distance on his drive. Their cards were:

Hutchinson—
Out	4	5	3	5	4	4	4	4	3	—36
In	4	4	4	3	4	5	4	4	4	—36—75
Travers—
Out	6	4	3	5	5	3	5	4	4	—39
In	5	3	5	3	4	4	3	5	5	—37—76

The youngsters of the amateur team each displayed their best golf ability. Bobby Jones won everything Same by defeating the veteran Fred McLeod of the Columbia Country Club by two holes. Jones had an approximate 76 and was 3 up on McLeod, only to lose the seventeenth by utilizing three putts. Perry Adair took the measure of George Simpson of Chicago by one hole. Adair had a card of 78, but played exceptionally well when necessary to hold his scant lead over the Chicago professional. Norman Maxwell finished all square with Jack Hobens, Englewood professional, after each had gone around in 76. Maxwell was 2 down at the turn, but came home in 37 to square the contest.

In their foursome match Jones and Adair snowed under Alex Cunningham and George Simpson by a six-hole margin. The Atlanta youngsters had 75 for the morning struggle, and managed to win two holes through the fortunate use of stymies. Playing with J. S. Worthington against James Maiden and George Fotheringham, Maxwell held the professionals to a draw at the home hole, and that Fotheringham sank a long putt and took the match by one hole brought no discredit upon the youthful Philadelphian.

Best Round Made by Mike Brady.

Mike Brady, the Massachusetts open champion, gave the best exhibition of golf of the day in defeating Jim Barnes, the professional champion, by five holes. Brady had a 71 and sank so many long putts Barnes decided the Boston homebred was unbeatable. Brady's card was:

Out	4	5	3	5	4	4	4	4	3	—36
In	4	3	4	3	4	4	4	5	5	—35—71

Travers and Oswald Kirkby had a one hole margin at the finish of their foursome with Hutchinson and McLeod. All played badly in this match, which the amateurs decided by winning the seventeenth, thus starting for the home hole 2 up. Hutchinson and McLeod won the last hole and saved that much glory out of the wreckage.

Emmett French had a narrow escape and was forced to make a picturesque shot in front of the gallery at the home hole to win his match from James West. West laid French a perfect stymie, but French pitched over the obstacle with his mashie and holed out to take the match by 1 up.

George McLean had a 72 in defeating Arthur Reid by 7 holes. Tom Kerrigan, Siwanoy professional, had his work cut out to dispose of Wilfred Reid by 2 up. Kerrigan played the course in 78 at that.

It was announced that the gallery at Baltusrol Wednesday had contributed $784 toward the war relief fund being raised by the Professional Golfers' Association. The sale of programs and other helping things has brought the sum above $3,000. The professionals hope to have a record gallery tomorrow at Garden City.

HARNESS MEET CUT SHORT.

Grand Circuit Meeting at Detroit Ended, One Day Early.

DETROIT, July 26. — The annual Grand Circuit meeting here was cut one day short by the management, presumably to prevent further loss, and so ended with today's racing. The last-day crowd saw a splendid race in the free-for-all pace, in which the season's speed record was established by Hal Boy, although Single G. won the race.

Ben Earl set the pace in the first heat, but Single G. overhauled him in the stretch and stayed there until the last eighth, when Hal Boy, who had been trailing close, came fast, carrying Single G. to a break and winning in 2:01¼, the record heat of the year, with the last half in 0:59¾.

TAKES FOUR BLUE RIBBONS.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 26.—Miss Isabella Wanamaker of Philadelphia won four of the sixteen blue ribbons distributed at the second day's exhibition of the Monmouth County Horse Show Association this afternoon. It was an ideal afternoon and while it rained hard further inland, just a sprinkle touched the quarter-mile track.

Miss Wanamaker excelled in tandems and triumphed twice over horses owned by A. W. Atkinson of Merchantville. She won first in the class for harness horses over 14.2 with Eve, and again with Eve in the harness class for horses over 15 hands, this time defeating Mr. Atkinson's Polonius. In a saddle class Miss Wanamaker won with Cherry Stone over Mrs. Gwen's Fannie Frances.

Walter H. Hanley won the biggest class judged during the afternoon, the combination saddle class for the B. B. O'Donohue prize, in which fifteen of the sixteen horses entered were shown. It was a nip and tuck contest, Driftwood Blaze winning over A. W. Atkinson's Sparkling Moselle.

In the harness class won by Miss Wanamaker's Suave two of the twelve horses entered were shown. In the saddle class for 15 hands and over Miss A. J. Lindsay of New York won with Nancy Bright.

TO HOLD GRENADE CONTEST

N. Y. A. C. Arranges Novel Event for Games Tomorrow.

A hand grenade throwing contest, in which soldiers will compete in full military uniform, stands out as the chief event of interest at the military athletic meet which will be held by the New York Athletic Club at Travers Island tomorrow. The soldiers competing will be allowed three throws from behind a fence, so that the conditions of the event will be as much those of trench condition as possible. The object will be a point ninety feet from the centre of the place from which the throw is made, and the participants will make their throws straight out, to the right and to the left, the points being judged according to the accuracy of the throw to the objective point.

This event is only one of a number of competitions arranged for the benefit of the soldiers stationed at the various posts around New York City. The program contains the biggest set of events the Winged Foot club has undertaken since starting its campaign to keep active interest in track and field sports, rowing and swimming during the war. Entries have been received from soldier-athletes stationed at Forts Totten, Jay, and Slocum, and to add to the gaiety of the occasion the Fort Slocum band will be on hand to render a concert.

Other events for soldiers on the program are:

100 yards dash, in athletic costume; a litter race, in uniform; a two-lap intercompany relay race, in light marching order; an equipment dressing race; a running high jump, in athletic costume, and a one-half mile run, in athletic costume.

In addition there will be a javelin throw for the men stationed at Fort Slocum and a one-half mile walk, in light marching order and carrying a gun, for the men of Fort Jay. The swimming races, which will start after the last of the athletic events has been decided, will consist of a 110-yards handicap race, a 440-yards scratch race, a 55-yards novice race, open to enlisted men, and a fancy diving handicap competition.

The chief rowing races will be a junior eight-oured shell and a centipede race, in which the crews must contain two juniors. There will also be several rowing races closed to members of the New York A. C. The athletic events are scheduled to start at two o'clock.

YANKS TAKE GAME AS SHADOWS FALL

The Yanks played ball all afternoon and part of the evening at the Polo Grounds yesterday to beat the White Sox in a 14-inning tussle by a score of 6 to 5. The Sox, imbued with pennant ambitions, made strong objections to everything the Yanks did from the start. Donovan's lads have become very superstitious about losing so many ball games, so they decided to change their luck and get a new mascot.

This new mascot is a real innovation in baseball. His name is Harry Walker, and his color is pale mahogany. The little darky wears a perpetual grin, which serves to counterbalance the grouchy appearance which frequent defeat has carved on the faces of the Yanks. The grin isn't the good omen which has brought a ray of sunshine into the club, but the fact that Walker has six toes on his left foot, is, according to the soothsayers, the real reason that the Yanks' luck has changed. Now that they have a mascot with six toes, the Yankee scouts have their eyes open for some pitchers with three arms and base runners with three or four legs.

For a time it looked as if the new jinx dispeller's charm wasn't going to work, for after the Yanks got a four-run lead in the first inning the White Sox came back and tied the score in the second chapter. Egged on by Clarence Rowland and Kid Gleason the Sox tried everything in their répertoire to squeeze over anything which resembled a run, but the Yanks held them off until the fourteenth and annexed the spoils.

With the score tied at 5 to 5 in the fourteenth, Paddy Baumann got an infield hit, which hopped merrily out of every one's way at second base. Peckinpaugh raised the Yank hopes to a high plane by poling a long hit to left, which looked like a home run, but the ball sliced off into foul territory. Peck then spilled the ball on to the infield rug, and Williams fielded it.

He threw the ball to second to force Peck, but the ball bounded off Peck's back and all hands were safe. Pipp then laid an infield tap and every-one's reach at third base and filled the bases. Frank Baker and his dangerous bat were received with loud welcome at this point. What Baker intended to do was to wallop a home run into the right field stand and while he didn't accomplish this particular purpose, he did something just as good by hoisting a high sacrifice fly to Joe Jackson in right field, which sent Baumann home with the winning run.

The Yankees had a high old time with Joe Benz in the first inning. High walked and Baumann cracked a single to right. Peck's sacrifice sent the runners along a station and Pipp's sacrifice fly sent High home. Baumann going to second after the throw in. Baker was then passed intentionally, the third time he had been accorded this flattery in two days.

A wild pitch by Benz pushed Baker to second and Baumann to third. Marsans, the Cuban stogie, clicked a single to center and Baumann scored, the Cuban going to second when the ball was thrown home. Miller sent a single to centre and scored Marsans.

With that generous four-run lead it looked like easy picking for Nick Cullop, who was pitching for the Yanks. In the second inning, however, the White Sox bats got the measure of Cullop's left-handed wares and they were smashed over the hills and far away. After Joe Jackson had flied to Peck, in the second, Happy Felsch was safe on Baker's low throw to first.

With a chance to tie the score within his grasp, Manager Rowland's excitement reached fever heat, and he sent Tom Jenkins as a pinch hitter for Benz. This bit of strategy resulted in nothing, because Jenkins fanned. John Collins got an infield hit at the third station, and Schalk went over the pan with the tying run. Eddie Collins then cut short any further destruction by the Sox.

Cullop weathered that inning all right, and was going along respectably until the sixth. Eddie Collins beat out a roller to short, and Jackson sacrificed. After Felsch had filled a high fly to Harman, Gandil rammed a single to left which sent Eddie Collins home and put the Sox in front. Unexpected generosity on the part of Danforth, who had succeeded Benz, made it possible for the Yanks to tie the score in their portion of the same inning.

Nunamaker, the first batter up, filed to Jackson, and Cullop walked. Danforth couldn't find the plate, and High got a pass. Baumann also got a walk, and filled the bases. Danforth was taken out and Williams brought in to the rescue. Peckinpaugh shot a hot grounder to Weaver, who forced Baumann at second, and while Eddie Collins was trying his level best to make it a double play at first, Cullop romped home with the run which looked like the game again.

The two teams then struggled along far into the night, both pitchers being accorded the snappiest kind of support when they were in any kind of trouble. It was now a simple question whether the Yankees' new pickaninny mascot would work or whether he wouldn't. His mystic spell finally reached Williams, the Sox pitcher, in the fourteenth, and after loading up the pillows, Baker's sacrifice sent the assembled citizens home happy.

DODGERS LOSE AND WIN.

PITTSBURGH, July 26.—Brooklyn and Pittsburgh divided the honors today, the Buccaneers taking the first by a score of 4 to 1, while the Dodgers walked away with the second, the score being 5 to 1. In the first game Harold Carlson, the Three I League recruit, pitched better ball than Ed Pfeffer, the veteran twirler of the Dodger crew. Pfeffer was wild, nicking three batsmen, and also passed three men. He was reached safely seven times.

However, he managed to weather the danger until the eighth inning, when the game was tied at 1 to 1. Then the Pirates settled the contest beyond doubt.

The Dodgers were the first to score. In the second, Happy Felsch was safe on Baker's low throw to first.

GIANTS SUCCUMB TO CUBS' ATTACK

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 26.—Playing bush ball, the Giants lost a one-sided and uninteresting contest to the Cubs this afternoon, 7 to 1. There never was a time during the game when the National League leaders were in the running or showed a semblance of the class that has given them a seven and a half game lead.

Tesreau, who was allowed to go the full nine innings, even though he was hit opportunely by the Bruins, was only in part responsible for the New York defeat. The four errors his mates made behind him played a big part in the final count. The Cubs touched Jeff for eight blows, three coming in the fourth, with a wild pitch and boot to clinch the game for the North Siders. A hit, walk, and a couple of mistakes added two more in the sixth, while two hits, following a pass, manufactured the initial tally of the contest in the first.

The Giants had Vaughn alarmed in nearly every round, but he always managed to revive when things looked darkest. Charley Herzog was the only visitor who delivered in a pinch, for it was his single that counted Burns in the fifth with the only New York run. This did not cause any worry, for the Cubs were leading by five runs when this session rolled around. Kauff, Zim, and Robertson experienced all sorts of trouble solving the home left-hander, Heinle's only hit being a bunt toward second, which he beat out.

Cy Williams put the Cubs in the lead, after two were out in the first inning, by swatting a double. Flack walked and reached second when Wolter beat out an infield tap. Doyle and Merkle raised easy infield pop-ups, but Long Cy poked out a double which registered Flack. Zelder's foul to the catcher closed the chapter. The Giants got men on base in each of the next three frames but couldn't get them over.

In the fourth, Zeidler put a Texas leaguer back of third and Wortman followed suit. Dilhoefer sacrificed, and when Vaughn hit to Fletcher, Rariden dropped the throw, letting Zeider count. Flack's single marked up Wortman and after Wolter went out via the pitcher, Tesreau scored on a wild pitch with Doyle at bat, permitting both Vaughn and Flack to scoot home.

DOCTORS FOR EMERGENCY.

Through the efforts of Mrs. Payne Whitney, Chairman, Mrs. Graham Blandy, Mrs. C. N. Bliss, Jr., Mrs. David Stevenson, and Mrs. Arthur Woods, members of the Women's War Auxiliary of New York Hospital, a police surgeon auxiliary medical corps has been equipped and 300 surgeons of this city, including the police and fire surgeons, organized into units to handle surgical cases in any emergency that may arise within the city.

The original amount raised by the women managers was $1,500. Some of the money came from the Hospital Social Service Association and some was given by Southern women now living in New York.

The equipment for the field dressing station is kept at the chief surgeon's office at Police Headquarters and can be delivered quickly to any part of the city by its automobile transport. The emergency bags containing the surgical and medical supplies are kept in each police inspection district office for the use of the medical officers, and may be reached quickly. This equipment will provide means for quick field dressing of wounds and makes possible the successful handling of large numbers of injured, in case some catastrophe should visit the city.

Dr. Edward T. Higgins, chief surgeon, Police Department, is the commanding officer. Each borough of the city has its own unit, in charge of a borough chief, elected by the members forming the unit. Borough units are sub-divided into zones, each zone having its own lieutenant medical officer in charge.

GLEN COVE PROTEST FAILS.

Court Gives No Comfort to Opponents of New City.

MINEOLA, July 26.—Judge Lewis J. Smith in the County Court here this morning dismissed the appeal, taken by those opposed to the formation of a city out of the village of Glen Cove, from the election which was held there on the question on June 30. Judge Smith held he had no jurisdiction. It was alleged that spoiled ballots were thrown on the floor and swept up, and that there was illegal voting. Counsel for the petitioners announced that he would institute a taxpayer's action in the Supreme Court for a writ to prevent the organization of the city government. The city advocates carried the election on June 30 by 7.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Activity at a New Low Level as Uncertainties of Situation Increase.

Dealings on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday were in the smallest volume for any five-hour session in more than four months. In this way the Street reflects its inability to gauge the ultimate effect of momentous changes in the business world growing out of the necessities for a much broader participation by the United States in the war than any one visioned in early April. The Russian situation is so bad that no one attempts nowadays to minimize its serious bearing on the probable lengthening of the war. There is still a feeling in banking circles in closest touch with Petrograd that Russia will prove true to her obligations to the Allies and will soon give a better account on the eastern battlefront, but the loss of priceless guns and ammunition obtained with so much difficulty has proved discouraging. Exports from this country to Russia have almost stopped, owing to the railway congestion, which is now so bad that it is estimated that a full year will be required to transport materials now at Vladivostok to their destination. The latest report on submarine sinkings has also served to unsettle further the hope that Great Britain had increased the effectiveness of her protection of the sea lanes to such a point that Germany would have to admit the futility of depending upon the U-boats to win the war.

However, the market takes each piece of bad news philosophically, and prices have held up remarkably well. This is taken to indicate a strong technical position which has made sellers more cautious in working for declines. For most of the day yesterday prices were firm, but they yielded in the final hour upon receipt of news that Secretary McAdoo had increased his tentative war budget to $6,000,000,000. No one deceives himself as to the size of the job that the United States has undertaken. It must make up within a few months for its lack of preparedness expenditures for several years back, and at the same time must shoulder a large part of the burden of carrying the weaker Allies to relieve Great Britain. In some quarters encouragement is derived from this situation on the ground that the Government will move very guardedly in adopting measures for price-fixing or for raising additional revenues in order not to slow down the production of needed supplies.

The Denman-Goethals deadlock was not broken a moment too soon, and it is of the utmost importance that every effort be bent to the production of new ships of all kinds as rapidly as possible. The scarcity of available tonnage has begun to choke export business, and very large foreign orders which were offered regardless of price have been refused by commission men and manufacturers because of their inability to engage cargo space. The movement of supplies for the American troops on the Continent will itself absorb a considerable part of shipping accommodation hitherto available for export business.

Action of the St. Paul Directors yesterday in reducing the annual dividend from 5 per cent. to 4 per cent. was well received. The company's shares moved up to 69¼ from the price of 68 made before the meeting, and the belief was encouraged that the company sees no reason to believe that future earnings will not be sufficient to maintain this modest rate. Advance inquiries indicate that the offering of $100,000,000 of Canadian Government two-year notes which is to be made on a basis to yield 6.07 per cent. will be well received. There is ample money for investment in short-term issues which is not available for long-term bonds, and it is not expected that the offerings now being made will interfere to any extent in the success of the next big loan by this Government.

Guaranty Securities Co. Dividend.

The Guaranty Securities Company, which was formed two years ago to promote the sale of automobiles on the partial payment plan, has declared a dividend for the quarter ended June 30 at the rate of 2 per cent. per year. A statement issued yesterday showed that the company's surplus increased in the quarter from $86,413 to $210,078. The balance sheet set forth notes and acceptances amounting to $10,006,720 among the assets, which were pledged to secure collateral trust notes, debentures, and bank loans. The amount of collateral notes and debentures outstanding was $7,554,500 on June 30. The total assets amounted to $12,881,269.

FIRM TONE IN LONDON.

Foreign Issues Neglected, with Exception of Swedish Bonds.

LONDON, July 26.—The tone of the stock market was generally firm today, though there was some irregularity, the taxed war loan being sold to invest in the tax free issue. The latter hardened appreciably. Home rails were neglected despite dividend payments. Industrial, oil and shipping shares were more active and steadier.

Foreign issues were firm on the improved exchange situation. American securities barely moved after adjustment to parity.

Money was in better demand and discount rates were firmer.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, July 26.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 61 francs 10 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 18 centimes. Five per cent. loan, 88 francs 65 centimes.

Canadian Notes to Yield 6.07%.

The $100,000,000 two-year notes of the Dominion of Canada will bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. and will be offered to the public at 98, at which price the yield will be 6.07 per cent. These details were announced yesterday, and it was said that the public offering would probably not be made until next week.

B. F. Goodrich Co. Earns $5,200,000

The B. F. Goodrich Company, rubber manufacturers, earned a net income of $5,200,000 in the half year ended June 30, a gain of $400,000 over the same period last year. The result reported yesterday was over and above the reservation for excess profits taxes. The profit was equal to approximately 7 per cent. on the common stock, after allowing for the preferred stock dividend.

WELCOMED BY EXCHANGE.

Stock Exchange members welcomed William A. Wallace back from France yesterday, where he had served with honor with the American Ambulance. The welcome was not the less warm for the reason that Mr. Wallace entered the ambulance service immediately after being suspended from the Exchange last year for violation of one of the trading rules. Because of his distinguished record the Governors of the Exchange two months ago remitted part of the penalty.

The Governors expelled James A. Taylor from membership yesterday for conduct "inconsistent with just and equitable principles of trade." Discipline, according to a Governor, resulted from proof that the broker had acted both as principal and broker in certain transactions. Mr. Taylor joined the Exchange on March 22, 1894, and for years was known as a specialist in Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé shares.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Has Steel Price Crest Been Reached?

A survey of current steel prices yesterday aroused speculation as to whether or not the crest of the upward movement had been passed. While the quotations for steel products presented in The Iron Age showed no changes from the preceding week, a drop of $2 a ton in Bessemer pig iron reduced the average price of eight leading items in the trade 25 cents a ton to $119.44. In the twelve preceding weeks the movement of the average quotation had been steadily forward to a maximum of $119.69. Bessemer iron, Pittsburgh, was priced at $55.95, against $57.95 the week before. All grades of iron moved off. Reports from steel-making centres indicate that consumers continue to hold off from purchases, a factor which is likely to be reflected sharply in forthcoming reports of steel company bookings. Besides a slackening of domestic buying, it is said that exporters are moving cautiously in respect to future contracts for shipments abroad because of uncertainty over the ocean tonnage situation. They are not desirous of taking on business which might not be possible of completion should the United States Government commandeer a large number of ships. The activities of German submarines also supply a factor of concern.

Shorts in the Motor Stocks.

The traders took another whack at the automobile stocks yesterday, getting considerable action on the downward side from General Motors and Studebaker. In the Street's opinion a big short interest has been built up in these issues and signs of covering transactions have been lacking. As time passes indications point toward a close cooperation between the auto concerns which make their own parts and the aeroplane makers. The Willys-Overland Company has already

ST. PAUL ROAD VOTES A REDUCED DIVIDEND

NOT UNEXPECTED IN STREET

Directors of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., at their meeting in New York yesterday, reduced the semi-annual dividend on the common stock from 2½ to 2 per cent. The usual 3½ per cent. semi-annual dividend on the preferred was declared.

The cut in the dividend on the common had been expected, the price of the stock having declined sharply in recent weeks. It sold at 92 at the beginning of the year and went down to 65⅛ three weeks ago. Yesterday it closed at 69⅝. With the payment of 2 per cent. the year's dividends on the common will amount to 4½ per cent., compared with 5 per cent. for 1916; 4½ per cent. in 1915; 5 per cent. from 1912 to 1914, and 7 per cent. from 1902 to 1911.

The reduction of the dividend directed attention to the St. Paul's earnings in recent months. While the gross income since Jan. 1 has been running at a high level, increased expenses steadily have eaten into the receipts. In the five months ended May 31 the road reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission a gross revenue of $42,871,071, an increase of $791,078 over the same period last year, but the net earnings, after taxes were paid, were $1,806,380 less than a year before, with a total of $8,528,447.

Last year the company earned its 5 per cent. dividend on the junior stock issue with only a moderate margin to spare. The profit available for dividend disbursement was equal to 6.77 per cent. per share, compared with 7.11 per cent. in 1915. The company in recent years has spent many millions of dollars in expanding its facilities and maintaining the existing properties. A few months ago the electrification of more than 400 miles of the system through the Rocky Mountains was completed at heavy expense, which is expected to make an excellent return in the future through the reduction of operating costs by the use of electric power. The burden put upon earnings in the current period of improvement work presumably has found reflection in the income account, promoting a conservative attitude toward dividends on the part of the Directors.

The Directors decided to comply with the request of A. J. Earling, the President, that he be relieved of some of the duties of his office. The Board authorized the appointment of a committee which is to co-operate with the President in making the changes in the by-laws and organization of the company necessary to carry out his wishes. It is understood that the plan proposed is to create the new office of Chairman of the Board and to elect Mr. Earling to that post.

It was definitely stated that Mr. Earling had not handed in his resignation, and after adjournment he told newspaper men that he did not contemplate severing his connections with the road. Mr. Earling is nearly seventy years old, and has been with the St. Paul for the past fifty years, having started in as a telegrapher.

The committee appointed to attend to the changes in the bylaws consists of P. A. Rockefeller, John D. Ryan of New York, and J. Ogden Armour of Chicago. All of the Directors, excepting Samuel McRoberts of New York and L. J. Petit of Milwaukee attended the meeting.

The dividends declared yesterday are payable Sept. 1 to holders of record on Aug. 7.

WHEAT.

The most conspicuous feature in the wheat market yesterday was an advance of 17 cents in the July position in Minneapolis, which served as a stimulating influence on the entire market. The advance there, however, was apparently due to covering on the part of belated shorts, and the July position moved up to an even parity with the cash markets, which was only natural with only five days more before the expiration of July contracts. There was still a scarcity of offerings of cash wheat in the local market and prices were nominal.

CORN.

Commission houses were good buyers of new-crop corn yesterday and, in consequence, prices were firm and higher. The demand was inspired by strength in the Southwestern markets and by reports that the crop was suffering in the Southwest as a result of heat and lack of moisture. Otherwise the crop accounts were very favorable, and the action of the market again gave evidence of an oversold condition. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at $2.37½, cost, insurance, and freight, New York, to arrive.

OATS.

The oats market was again firm, with an active demand from July shorts and a fair commission house trade in the new crop months. There seems to be little probability of getting much new oats before the middle of August, but reports on yields were flattering. The local cash market was firm; standard quoted at 91¼@92c; No. 2 white, 92¼c; No. 3 white, 91@91¼c; No. 4 white, 90¼@91c; fancy clipped, 92@93c; ordinary clipped white, 90@92c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market showed further strength early with more or less buying by commission houses, but eased off late and closed at the lowest, with prices under the previous night. It seemed to be the prevailing impression that too much bullish importance was attached to the buying by the Belgian Relief, although it was said that bids would be open and would be quite extensive. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 18,000 head; estimated for Friday 16,000. Kansas City received 6,000 and Omaha 2,500.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was feverish and reflected a feeling of uncertainty in the minds of operators. THE COTTON MARKET

Undertone Firm, with October Up to 24.61—Final Prices 7 to 21 Points Net Higher.

For the most part the cotton market yesterday showed a firm undertone, and October contracts sold at one time about 36 points net higher, at 24.61c. Houses connected with Japanese interests were the chief buyers of October, while English houses sold Winter months, presumably against buying which they have done recently in the South. The advance brought in more covering for Wall Street and other accounts, but near the close, following a subsidence of trade demand, a good deal of realizing took place and offset part of the advance. Final prices were only 7 to 21 points net higher, with the tone barely steady.

Advices from Liverpool stating that the British Shipping Controller hoped to provide space for the importation of 30,000 bales of new crop American cotton each week, while regarded as of much importance, was not altogether understood, some asserting that it was a practical guarantee that a minimum of 30,000 bales would be imported weekly, with the possibility that the amount might run much higher, while others took it to mean a restriction to 30,000 bales of American cotton weekly in Lancashire or about half their normal requirements, and that the cotton would be used on Government orders and in goods for home consumption.

Some of the Japanese buying has been understood to be for mills which have been getting far eastern markets that were formerly supplied by Manchester.

The opening of the local market was steady, with a decline of 13 to 16 points. It resulted from bearish crop news from the Southwest and from indications that clearing weather was likely in the Eastern belt, this view getting later confirmation from the official forecast. The bear theory was that the plant had not been injured to any extent by the rains thus far in the Southeast and, that with a period of clear weather from now on, would make very rapid progress. A number of private crop reports contained favorable references to the outlook in the Southeast, while exporters here from San Antonio said the crop in Texas had been vastly improved by recent rains. Other advices said it would not be surprising to see the next Bureau report indicate a condition of 76 or better for Texas, as North Texas and parts of Central and East Texas will show big improvements.

In its monthly canvass of cotton crop conditions, a local newspaper indicated improvement in Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, where the plant is small but strong and healthy, with good cultivation and clean fields. Boll weevils, widely scattered, have done but little damage thus far, and no shedding was reported. The crop is well fruited, but still fully two weeks late. The Alabama condition was reported slightly better, and Louisiana about unchanged.

Exports today were 5,727 bales, making 6,891,616 bales so far this season, against 5,969,740 last year.

COFFEE.

Dullness prevailed in the coffee market throughout the session, prices having only a narrow range, with the trend somewhat easier as a result of bearish political news from Europe, more inclination on the part of Brazil to sell, and an absence of any trade demand. The later selling made the market a trifle easy at the close, and final prices were generally unchanged to 2 points net lower. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The market for sugar futures opened firm, in keeping with the unusually strong spot situation, and on the call prices showed advances of 1 to 8 points. Prices later showed further gains of a few points on support from operators and Wall Street, but late in the afternoon values sagged off a little on liquidation of long accounts. The market is particularly free of speculative interest at this time. The close was 1 to 7 points net higher, with total sales of 13,900 tons. Range of prices:

The market for refined sugar was firm and unchanged at 7.75@8.50c for fine granulated. The inquiry continues good, but owing to the oversold condition of refiners they were inclined to limit new business. While the volume of business in raw sugar was not very heavy the undertone continued firm, with prices advancing 1-16c and making new high records. The business amounted to 200 tons of Cubas from store to a Canadian refiner at equal to 6.88c for centrifugal. Local refiners would also pay this price, and at the close it was rumored that 5⅝c was bid by local refiners without response from holders. The close was firm at 5 13-16c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 6.83c for centrifugal and 5.95c for molasses. The Porto Rico crop is practically over and the Cuban crop is rapidly being brought to a close. It is said that refiners have sold heavily for export, and the domestic demand has also been good, and in some quarters there is fear that there will be a shortage of raw supplies.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 6,836 packages. NEUTRALS SELL LESS COTTON TO GERMANY

ALLIES ADD TO STOCKS

Entrance of United States Into War Said to be Responsible for Big Shift in Shipments.

Germany received less American cotton through the medium of neutral European countries in the ten months of the Government's fiscal year 1917, ended with April, than in the corresponding period of the year before, according to figures prepared by the Department of Commerce, which are supplemental to the statistics covering the fiscal years 1915 and 1916, already in the possession of the Council of National Defense and its Advisory Board.

The statistics, which are the latest to be compiled for the closing months of the fiscal year 1917, also reveal that whereas the neutrals of Europe were in the period getting less cotton, this country's allies, with the exception of Italy and Russia, were adding to their stocks when compared with the corresponding ten months of 1916. Spain, however, in the comparative period of 1917, appeared to be the only European neutral taking more American cotton than in the period immediately preceding. The strict supervision of cotton exports from this country to Europe by Great Britain in the months of the fiscal year preceding the entrance of the United States into the European struggle, was thought at the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to be responsible for the slump to neutrals on the Continent.

A significant thing about the ten months' figures covering exports to Sweden, Denmark, Norway, the Netherlands, and Switzerland was that, although these countries paid more for cotton in the latest period when contrasted with the like period of 1916, they actually imported less American cotton and linters in the ten months' period of 1917, due to the advance in the price of the commodity.

The Department of Commerce report, while not making separate enumerations for the European neutrals, grouped them under the head of "other Europe," as differentiated from the United Kingdom, France, Italy, Russia, and Spain, the last-named being the only European neutral to be given a distinct classification.

According to the Government report, American cotton shipments to Scandinavia, the Netherlands, and Switzerland in the ten months of the fiscal year 1917 totaled 102,076,460 pounds, against 118,543,540 pounds in the same period of 1916. Summarized, these neutrals in the 1917 period received 16,467,086 pounds less than in the corresponding period of 1916, while their loss when compared with the 1915 period footed up more than half a billion pounds, the exact figures being 602,210,450 pounds.

Spain, the report showed, appeared to have a pretty free hand in the buying of American cotton in the ten-month period of 1917, as exports from here aggregated 176,025,203 pounds, valued at $31,765,949, compared with 141,858,063 pounds, worth $17,420,806, in the like period of 1916. In the ten months of 1915 Spain's purchases of the commodity here totaled 192,007,931 pounds, valued at $16,268,310.

The United Kingdom's purchases of American cotton in the ten months of the fiscal year, ended with April, approached the quarter-billion-dollar mark, the exports having been 1,327,513,181 pounds, valued at $239,001,924. This, compared with 1,137,949,630 pounds, worth $138,963,363, in the 1916 period, and 1,710,866,811 pounds, valued at $141,-390,363, in 1915.

French purchases in the 1917 period totaled 461,283,902 pounds for which $69,689,532 was paid. This compared with 377,655,670 pounds in 1916, and 292,-060,948 pounds in the 1915 period. Italy in the ten months' period of 1917 bought 295,180,896 pounds, costing $49,859,555, Italian purchases in the 1916 period amounting to 353,625,052 pounds, while in 1915, 145,190,901 pounds were taken for Italy's account. Cotton for Russia in the 1917 period totaled 24,276,638 pounds, the value of which was $4,134,-155. This was a big falling off compared with the ten months of 1916, when cotton exports to Russia in Europe aggregated 73,228,295 pounds. Belgium, which before the war was a good-sized buyer of American cotton, did not figure as a buyer in the latest report.

Other principal shipments of cotton in the ten months' period were: Japan, 252,714,728 pounds; Canada, 67,715,223, and Mexico, 2,238,965 pounds. The rest of the world was credited in the period with taking 61,404,372 pounds of the commodity.

Counting Sea Island, upland and other cotton and linters, the 1917 period's exports reached 2,770,429,568 pounds, or 5,325,634 bales, valued at $478,755,351. In the corresponding ten-month period of 1916 the exports were returned at 2,-537,712,405 pounds, or 4,893,827 bales, worth $302,828,685. The statistics for the like period of 1915 were 3,915,876,237 pounds, or 7,487,867 bales, the value of which was placed at $330,498,344.

NATION NOT IN PATENT DEAL

Cross-Licensing in Airplane Industry Between Companies Only.

Leading airplane manufacturers have entered into an agreement fo the mutual use of patents, of which the most important are owned by the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Corporation and the Wright-Martin Company. Details which came to light yesterday bore out the reports in respect to the arrangement heard on Wednesday, with the exception that the Government does not appear as a principal in the matter.

"An agreement has been reached for closs-licensing in the air industry," said an officer of the Curtiss Corporation, "similar to the agreement existing in the automobile industry. The Government has bought no airplane patents and shows no signs of buying them. Royalties will be paid on all airplanes manufactured, but these royalties will be paid by the manufacturers and not by the Government.

"The group of patents owned by the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Corporation and the Wright-Martin Company fo into the agreement at an identical calculation, both companies, during the life of their patents, to receive royalties to aggregate the same amount, not to exceed $2,000,000. All patent litigation between these two companies, or between the companies in the cross-licensing association, ceases automatically. The airplane indstry is free from the restrictions of patent litigation for the duration of the war."

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

While the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange held well during the greater part of the day, trading was aggressive only in spots. Steel at one time sold as high as 122¼, with nearly 20,000 shares dealt in. The steel shares and the war specialties were generally firm early in the day, although there were some reactions later on. Considering the general character of the market, commission house dealings were on a good scale. They included a broad distribution of odd-lot orders.

RUINING BERLIN LAWNS.

Thieves Pilfer Hose and Other Sprinkling Apparatus.

German newspapers recently received in London report that in Berlin lawns, flower beds, and shrubberies are being almost ruined by the thieving and destructive propensities of the people. Hose has been cut up or carried off, sprinkling apparatus demolished, and brass, copper, or zinc utensils and tools have been stolen.

The oak trees of the Tiergarten have been stolen almost "bald" by a plague of caterpillars. According to the Vossische Zeitung, hardly a tree in the park has a leaf left.

Depreciation of Dollar Hurts.

The depreciation of the dollar in Switzerland, as a result of the entry of this country into the war, is not making any lighter the burdens of the firms which import laces and embroideries from the Swiss markets. According to one well-known importer, it now takes approximately $1.15 to pay for a dollar's worth of goods in St. Gall, which condition is causing some houses to hold back remittances. The question is raised in other quarters, however, whether this is a wise thing from the view of the possibility of still further depreciation. At the present rate of exchange, it is said, about $5,750 would be required to pay, in francs, an invoice that on this side of the Atlantic calls for $5,000 in American money.

May Sell to Consumers.

With the discount controversy that has been the main topic in the women's wear trade, brought to Washington by the manufacturers who desire to find out if some action cannot be brought against the retailers who threaten to place their business only where they can get the old terms, the first step at retaliation has been taken by the manufacturers. Even among the garment makers not much reliance toward helping their cause is placed in such action. Reports now going the rounds of the trade, however, have it that, if some of the larger houses find themselves up against damaging discrimination, what they will do is to start in selling the consumer direct, as several in the industry are already doing successfully.

Raw Silk Prices Higher.

Reports from the Yokohama raw silk market say that another sharp advance in prices has taken place in the last week, and also that the market continues excited, with buyers hard after silks available for spot and nearby shipments. Little news is coming from the Canton and Shanghai markets, where the abnormally high exchange is seriously interfering with business. Tussahs are quoted at record levels, but in spite of this sales are reported for shipment as far ahead as January. Little buying for American account is being done in Milan. Locally, buying is active and prices are advancing rapidly. Stocks in the hands of importers are the lightest ever known, and are poorly assorted.

Says It Will Delay Shipments.

One bad effect of taking from business the men drafted for the National Army will be the delaying of shipments of Fall merchandise. "While it will not be nearly so hard to get new help as some men think," a local wholesaler said yesterday, "one place where this house will feel the withdrawals will be in the shipping department. Other houses are going to have the same trouble. The work will not consist of getting workers to take the places of those who have gone, but of getting experienced workers to replace them. Calling the men to the colors while the Fall season is virtually at its height will doubtless be one of the heaviest burdens the draft will put on wholesale business."

Piece Goods Sold by Brokers.

The business built up during the last few seasons by brokers in piece goods has attained quite respectable dimensions. With prices so high in the primary market, the clothing manufacturers find the opportunities afforded them through the purchases of goods through brokers yield satisfactory results. It is said that the buying done in this way will reach record proportions for the season just starting. This is due to the fact that there seems to be a good surplus of merchandise that the smaller manufacturers are unable to carry and are, therefore, willing to sell. Furthermore, these goods are offered at quite a saving below the market.

Parasols in Better Favor.

The extremely hot weather has helped the sale of parasols in a more active way than such merchandise has been affected in some time. There is quite a wide variety in the styles of parasols being offered. Among those featured are the plain as well as the ruffled designs in combinations of brilliant colorings. For the most part, however, the manufacturers seem bent on providing a useful article, as most of the parasols give a fairly large "spread" and are not the dainty and somewhat impractical patterns that were formerly the vogue.

Silks Still Geometrical.

Although predictions were made some time ago that silks in geometrical designs had run their course in the demand, goods of this description still find a fairly active call. According to buyers the novelty of these goods has proved the main attraction, as they are unlike any other patterns that are sold. The manufacturers understand, of course, that the sale of these goods is limited to use in semi-sport costumes, principally skirts, and consequently do not figure the vogue to remain for any length of time.

Gems Are Seasonably Active.

While the call for gems in the local market is no more active than it ever is at this time of the year, it also is no lighter. Reports from certain quarters indicate that fine Chinese jade is about as free a seller as anything, in spite of the fact, that the rapid rise in the cost of Mexican dollars, with which it is paid for, has increased their purchase price. The diamond dealers have absolutely no fault to find with the condition of business, but there are indications that a larger supply of these stones would come in handy. Some of the jewelry manufacturers are said to be held back in their work by the lack of them. Prices are extremely firm, but the dealers say there is no merchandise in the world that represents greater values than diamonds at their current cost.

Velour Hats Active Here.

Local manufacturers report considerable activity at the moment on velour hats in tailored and sport effects, principally in white, black, brown, navy, purple, gold, and emerald green. JURY WILL ATTACK DETECTIVE METHODS

Will Urge Also Administrative Reorganization at Police Headquarters.

AID TO COCCHI UNPROVED

Only Meagre Reports Reached the High Officials Regarding the Work of the Precinct Men.

The District Attorney's office gathered further information yesterday to be presented to the Extraordinary Grand Jury showing that the information gleaned by detectives working on the disappearance of Ruth Cruger and the escape of her murderer, Alfredo Cocchi, filtered through to Police Headquarters in the form of meagre reports, so that Deputy Commissioner Guy H. Scull and Police Commissioner Woods, who assumed personal direction of the case, became only remotely acquainted with the work the detectives were doing.

The testimony introduced thus far indicates that Deputy Commissioner Guy H. Scull completely reversed the policy introduced by George S. Dougherty, who, when he was Deputy Commissioner in charge of detectives, examined witnesses and required detectives to tell him personally about the work they had done and to receive orders directly from him. The statements of policemen and detectives who worked on the Cruger case thus far is to the effect that they never talked to Deputy Commissioner Scull, even after he was directed to take personal charge of the case, and that all information forwarded to him was in the form of reports from detectives or from Acting Captain Alonzo Cooper.

These reports were in most cases extremely bare of detail, so that the superior officers who received them could only form a general notion of the work of detectives. For instance, Detective John Lagarenne merely wrote, "I searched the cellar," after he had paid a visit to the basement of the Cocchi premises. He was never questioned by his superors to ascertain wnether his search had been thorough or superficial, and never was asked to tell the condition in which he found things there. No means of testing the efficiency and completeness of the work of any of the detectives were employed, and it was not until the Wallstein inquiry was held that the crude and perfunctory methods of the detectives were placed on record.

It was reported yesterday that, although it was doubtful whether anything that could be construed as indictable negligence would be found against any one at Police Headquarters, it was a certainty that the investigation would result in a finding that a complete reorganization of the administrative force at Police Headquarters was essential and that an entire revision of detective methods was necessary. While there is evidence of laziness and mental limitations in the cases of individual detectives and patrolmen, it was said yesterday that no indications had been found that any of the detectives on the case had tried to aid Cocchi. The most glaring fault in the police management of the case revealed thus far, it was reported yesterday, was not these delinquencies of men in the lower grades, but the failure of those of higher rank to discover that the detectives were using haphazard methods and disregarding valuable evidence.

Arthur Cocchi, the nine-year-old son of Alfredo Cocchi, said yesterday at the District Attorney's office, that he had heard his father's voice and the voice of another man in the basement at about 4 o'clock on the afternoon of Feb. 13, the afternoon when Cocchi killed Ruth Cruger. This was not taken, however, as indicating that Cocchi might have an accomplice, because at the time the body of the girl was in the rear room of the shop, and Cocchi, who was still carrying on his business, might have had a customer in the cellar. Arthur said that the back room in Cocchi's shop, in which the girl's body lay, was locked at the time.

Commissioner Woods said yesterday that he had made four transfers of Captains, but that these changes had nothing to do with the police failure in the Cruger case. The transfers are as follows: Captain Charles H. McKinney, from the Macdougal Street Station to the Richmond Hill Station, Queens; Captain Patrick Corcoran, from the Richmond Hill Station to the Atlantic Avenue Station in Brooklyn; Captain Michael R. Kelly, from the Atlantic Avenue Station to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, and Captain Edward J. Dempsey, from the West Sixty-eighth Street Station to the Macdougall Street Station.

Mr. Rosenberg Now Mr. Ross.

Adolphus Rosenberg, a newspaper writer, living in this city, who was formerly editor of newspapers in London, announced yesterday that he had dropped the surname "Rosenberg" and taken that of "Ross," and that he will be known hereafter as Adolphus R. Ross.

PUT BERKMAN IN THE TOMBS

Alexander Berkman, Morris Becker, and Louis Kramer, the last named the anarchist who recently asserted that it would be a good thing for the United States if the President were dead, were brought back to New York from the Federal Penitentiary in Atlanta yesterday afternoon, and, failing to furnish bail, all three were locked up in the Tombs. The three stand convicted of conspiracy to obstruct the operation of the military laws of the United States, and have been brought back to New York to await the outcome of an appeal from the decision of the Federal District Court of New York to the Supreme Court of the United States. Emma Goldman, the fourth anarchist sent to the penitentiary for the same offense, will arrive in New York this morning from the penitentiary at Jefferson City, Mo.

Harry Weinberger, a lawyer who sometimes speaks at anarchist meetings in New York, went before Judge Martin T. Manton in the Federal Court yesterday and sought an order directing Assistant United States District Attorney Harold A. Content, who is in charge of the case for the Government, to accept real estate security for the anarchist prisoners. Mr. Content is insisting on cash bail, which for the four prisoners amounts to $72,000. The real estate offered as security for the anarchists, Mr. Content said, was assessed for about $150,000. Mr. Weinberger, he added, had informed him that it was assessed for $17,000 in excess of that sum. The property offered as bail was said to be owned by Emil Selig.

Mr. Content told the court that Mr. Weinberger had on several occasions made remarks to him about taking various phases of the case to Justice Brandeis for decision. Mr. Content said that he was rather tired of Mr. Weinberger's continual talk about taking this or that point in the case to Justice Brandeis.

When Miss Goldman arrives this morning Mr. Weinberger again will try to get his clients out on bail. Mr. Content still refuses to take other than cash bail. It was pointed out, however, that in the event Berkman gets bail he will be rearrested immediately on a California warrant charging him with murder in connection with the Preparedness Day bomb outrage in San Francisco last year. It was said that Berkman would fight extradition to California and would allege that he was the victim of a "frame up."

Immigration Commissioner Howe notified Mr. Content yesterday that in the event Berkman, Kramer, and Becker were liberated the immigration authorities were ready to give prompt consideration to a proposal to deport them to the country whence they came to the United States. They are aliens, and as such can be deported after conviction of crime in this country. Miss Goldman, being the daughter of a naturalized citizen, cannot be deported under the American law.

BAFF PROSECUTOR SUMS UP.

Poultry Market Murder Will Go to the Jury Today.

Deputy Attorney General James O'Malley, who replaced District Attorney Swann in the prosecution of the indictment charging Joseph and Jacob Cohen, Abraham Graff and David Jacobs with joint complicity in the murder of Barnet Baff, occupied nearly the entire session yesterday in summing up for the people. Justice Tompkins, who presided at the trial, will charge the jury today.

Mr. O'Malley declared at the outset that the District Attorney was in possession of many important clues and damaging evidence against the four men long before Antonio Cardinale, who, it is alleged, hired the gunmen, returned from Italy with Assistant District Attorney Black and turned State's evidence.

"We knew of the hatching of the murder plot in a Harlem saloon and Abraham Graff's participation in it," he said. "We were on the trail of the defendants long before we were able to get Cardinale back from Italy. Before this man would tell us his story he demanded immunity, and then he said that Archicilla, the man convicted on his testimony of having fired the fatal shot, was not guilty of the crime.

"The District Attorney and myself were shocked, but after investigation and after Frank Ferrara, who drove the murder car, now awaiting death in Sing Sing, had corroborated Cardinale, we realized that a mistake had been made. Archicilla did not fire the fatal shot, but he cannot escape the consequences of having been one of the murder conspirators."

NEW YORK LOSES ITS LAST HORSE CAR

NOTABLES MAKE FINAL TRIP

Fifty-three years ago, when George Opdyke was Mayor of New York and goats browsed along what is now Riverside Drive, the people were startled to learn that a company had been incorporated to operate a car line through the most populous and select streets. When the first car of the Bleecker Street & Fulton Ferry line pulled out and went gliding along behind a team of horses caparisoned with bells even the most pessimistic admitted that New Yorkers were up and doing. It would take a lot of space to print the route of that wonderful line.

It began on the west at Eleventh Avenue and Fourteenth Street, traversed Greenwich Village, passed through Crosby Street, and finally reached Park Row and Fulton Street. Part of the distance of many miles there was a double track, but mainly the track was single. Passing through many changes, the line kept its honored place in the municipal railroad world until yesterday morning, when the last of the dirty old cars, with their faithful horses and husky drivers, were withdrawn, never again to reappear. What glory, therefore, that came to this giant and progressive city for maintaining the last horse-drawn car disappeared forever. We are now no more notable in transportation than Chicago or Philadelphia.

The men who did this thing were the officials of the New York Railways Company, aided and abetted by the Public Service Commission. The reason they gave was the sordid one of lost money and lack of public necessity. For many months only one car has been operated on the line in West Street and thence by devious ways to Broadway and Bleecker Street. The car used was a sight, but it was as good as any that drooped in the car barn. The purpose of keeping it going was to save the franchise. One day, July 17 last, it earned 10 cents on the single trip it made. During 1916 the line carried only 3,576 passengers all told, and the total of receipts was $178.80. In the present fiscal year the line earned only $103.60. But the upkeep cost the company $4,000 a year.

The fact was, nobody would wait for the car, and they wouldn't ride on it anyway because it was far from clean, comely, or fast, and by walking a short distance in any direction one of the new-fangled cars could be found. General Manager Hedley of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company rode on the last trip yesterday, with several other officials of his company. There were also present Public Service Commissioners Whitney and Hervey and Secretary James B. Walker and Assistant Secretary Daggett of the commission.

Two cars were waiting at Bleecker Street and Broadway, but all of those mentioned got into the first car, which was in charge of James Cusack, driver, who has held the same job for forty years, and Conductor Thomas O'Brien, who has been on the job more than thirty years. Those inside gazed with awe at the rusty old stove. But the stove was all right. A lot of paper was thrust into it and set afire, and the car trundled along with smoke pouring out of its battered pipe, to the wonder of the populace. If everybody on the car had paid fare the trip would have been one of the most profitable in several years. But nobody paid, and so it cost more than the usual average of $1.50 a passenger.

In a few days the Public Service Commission will permit the tearing up of the tracks, new jobs will be found for the old employes, and the horses—ah! who knows what will become of those faithful beasts? A movie concern was on hand, and pretty soon rural communities will sit in their favorite theatres and see what this city has lost.

SOLDIER WEDS HIS NURSE.

His heroism in rushing into a burning building on April 3 and extinguishing the blaze may result in Leo Heck, a member of Company H, Seventy-first Regiment, New York National Guard, having to undergo an operation at Bellevue Hospital, but it also got him a bride. The girl is Miss Helen Maud Lymer, a nurse, of Toronto, and they were married at Hamilton, Ontario, on Monday night.

Heck was in a military camp up-State when the fire broke out in a big dwelling house. While fighting the blaze in the third story the floor gave way and he was injured by the fall. He was taken to a nearby hospital, and Miss Lymer, who was employed there at that time, was assigned to nurse him. Under her care he improved and was able to leave the hospital on May 6, but not before patient and nurse had fallen in love.

Recently Heck obtained a furlough and came to Bellevue Hospital to consult doctors, and was told that an operation probably would be necessary. He was at the hospital on Sunday morning awaiting an X-ray examination when he learned that his fiancée had left the up-State hospital the previous day for Hamilton, where she had joined a hospital maintained for wounded British soldiers. He left for Hamilton on the next train, arrived there Monday, and they were married on Monday night by the Rev. W. B. Figie of the Hamilton Baptist Church. Heck has returned for the X-ray examination.

In every community men are drilling for National Preparedness. For all these men the frequent use of ALLEN'S FOOT=EASE, the antiseptic powder, shaken into the Shoes and sprinkled in the Foot-bath, increases their efficiency and insures needed physical comfort. The British and French troops in Europe, and the American troops use Allen's Foot=Ease, because it takes the Friction from the Shoe and freshens the feet. The Plattsburg Camp Manual, chapter on General Advice, states: "Every morning shake a little talcum powder or Foot=Ease in each shoe." SHIRES ADOPT BOY SOUGHT BY MOTHER

She and the Father Finally Renounce Claims to Little Joseph Petzonk.

CHILD'S WANDERINGS END

The final chapter in the wanderings of Joseph Petszonk, who was abandoned by his mother at the age of 6 months, was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Leo D. Shire of 41 West Eighty-second Street, then given up by them after the mother had found the boy, following a long search, and had started court proceedings, again given up a few days later by the real parents and subsequently returned to them again by the Shires because the Shires decided that the boy was dissatisfied in their home, was written in the Surrogates Court yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Shire, who had decided to give the boy another chance in their household, found that he again was happy and contented with them, and got permission from Surrogate Cohalan to make him their legal son, giving him the name George Bernard Shire.

The application for the court order legalizing the boy's adoption was made to Surrogate Cohalan by the State Charities Aid Association, which submitted affidavits by Mr. and Mrs. Shire as to their ability and willingness to rear the boy in comfort as their own son, and also a general release of all claims on the boy by his parents, Joseph and Hannah Petszonk, each of whom "voluntarily and unconditionally" surrendered him and signed an agreement saying, "I pledge myself not to interfere with the custody or management of the child in any way, nor to encourage or allow any one else to do so."

The child first figured in the newspapers last March when Mrs. Petszonk, after a long search, found that the boy she had abandoned at the Madonna Day Nursery in Cherry Street on Aug. 19, 1911, because her husband was out of work and she was unable to care for a six months' old infant while she was supporting her family, had been in the Shire household since Jan. 15, 1913, when he was sent there by the State Charities Aid Association. Although the testimony in the case before Justice Guy at that time indicated that the boy's welfare would not be promoted if he were returned to his parents, the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Petszonk had never surrendered their claim to the boy gave them the legal right to his custody, and Mr. and Mrs. Shire gave him up regretfully.

The boy was so unhappy in the home of his blood relatives at 898 Union Avenue, The Bronx, that the parents offered to return him to the Shires pending arrangements for his formal adoption. The parents then objected to signing a release of all claims, and Mr. and Mrs. Shire sent the boy back to his father, mother, and younger brother about three months ago. In the meantime those concerned agreed to take the action culminating yesterday in the legal adoption.

HALTS PANAMA EXTRADITION

Commissioner Matthews Decides That the Bataille Need Not Return.

United States Commissioner John A. Matthews in Newark yesterday decided that under the treaty of 1904 with the Republic of Panama Eugenio C. and Emilio Bataille of Hilton, N. J., could not be extradited from this country to Panama, where they are wanted on a charge of accepting deposits in the Continental Loan and Trust Company when they had knowledge that the bank was about to close.

Commissioner Matthews based his finding on Article 5 of the extradition treaty, which reads: "Neither of the contracting parties shall be bound to deliver up its citizens or subjects under the stipulations of this treaty."

Spoiled Fruits Principal Item in Week's Confiscation.

Impure foodstuffs weighing 210,963 pounds and having a retail value of more than $30,000 were condemned and confiscated by the Department of Health in the last week, it was announced yesterday by Lucius P. Brown, Director of the Bureau of Pure Foods and Drugs.

The foodstuffs included 79,320 pounds of grape fruit, 71,120 pounds of lemons, 19,922 pounds of ham, 18,500 pounds of salt herring, 9,543 pounds of beef, 8,780 pounds of potatoes, 2,100 pounds of eggs, and 370 pounds of poultry. In addition, the Health Department also condemned 4,440 pounds of impure jelly that was found at preserving plants.

The loss of all this food, it was said at the department, was due chiefly to faulty packing and poor transportation arrangements. There has been a perceptible falling off in the quantity of potatoes lost by spoiling, because of the fidelity with which shippers have begun to follow the instructions for packing issued by the department, it was said. The loss of eggs and poultry is also reported to be diminishing.
